INTRODUCTION.

The register of archbishop John le Romeyn, or Romanus, is written on parchment, and, like the register of archbishop William Wickwane, has been rebound in modern times in citron coloured morocco leather. The folios are  $12\frac{1}{8}$  by  $8\frac{1}{2}$  inches in size, and, following the modern foliation which occurs in pencil at the lower left hand corner of the folio and is continuous throughout, number 165. This figure includes all the interpolations, "constituciones Bonifacii pape viij" (folios 153, 154), and an index on paper at the end, amounting to six folios, compiled by Torre. The interpolations are folios 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 23, 24, 29, 39, 48, 55, 56, 81, 100, 113, 114, 117, 118, 119, 119a, 120, 121, 122, 123, 143, 148, 165.

In this volume the text of the register is printed down to fo. 103d, the end of the fifth year of the Capitula. The present volume contains the larger part of the register, 1,119 documents out of rather under 1,600. Besides the Indulgences and the Officiality and part of the Capitula, the records of the four archdeaconries are here printed, so that with the exception of the spiritualities of Howden and Allerton, which do not contain much of importance, all of what may be termed the parochial part of the register is now before the reader.

As it is intended to write a detailed life of archbishop le Romeyn when all his register is in print, it will now be only necessary to mention the more important facts in his career.<sup>1</sup> Son of a treasurer of York of the same name, he, like his father, was the son of a priest. Prior to his elevation to the archbishopric his preferments were principally in the church of Lincoln, where, besides holding prebends, he occupied the offices of chancellor and precentor. At York he seems to have held nothing except the prebend of Warthill, to which he was collated in 1279.<sup>2</sup> He was elected archbishop, October 29, 1285, in succession to archbishop Wickwane, consecrated at Rome on Feb. 10th following, and received the temporalities on April 12th. He soon after left London on his way north. He was at Bermondsey on April 18, 1287 (no. 1187), and the same day reached St. Albans (no. 34). On the 27th he was at Laneham (no. 20), and slowly proceeding northward through his diocese arrived at York on June 9, when his enthronization took place (no. 1413). His last recorded act is dated March 4, 1295-6, in the eleventh year of his pontificate (nos. 434, 530, 698), just a week before his death, March 11.

Le Romeyn's register is one of very considerable importance, as it was taken as a model for succeeding registers. His letters were long after cited as specimens of the epistolary art, and the long list of precedents in the 'Kalendarium' at the commencement of this register, for the most part contemporary, but with many later additions, served for many years as a model to the clerks in the archbishop's chancery for drawing up the various kinds of documents which were issued from their office. This list will be printed in the next volume. A certain number of more or less formal documents, which would otherwise have been given more briefly, are here printed at length so as to give specimens of all the various forms cited in the list. The late Canon Raine told the present writer that he considered this the model register. The logical arrangement of the contents, the uniform and clear though small writing, and the methodical manner in which the different documents have been entered up fully justify the canon's eulogy.

account of this prelate in the <sup>2</sup>Wickwane's Register, nos. 9, 10.

A list of the visitations made by the archbishop in the first year of his pontificate will give some idea of the energy he displayed in discharging the duties of his office :—

<sup>2</sup>There appears to be no other mention of a separate deanery of Rotherham at this period. It seems likely that the archbishop visited Doncaster deanery in two portions, and that the mention of the western half as the deanery of Rotherham was a slip on the part of the registrar.

In addition there were ordinations at Tadcaster and Pocklington on June 8 and September 21, convocation at York on November 13, and an inquiry about pluralities and appropriations of churches to religious houses, lasting from September 30 to October 2. The archbishop also found time to visit his manor at Hexham in September and to make a rapid journey to Durham in November. Although, as may be expected, more had to be done in the first year than later, his activity continued unabated. For example, in his second year he visited religious houses at Selby, Hampole, Monk Bretton, St. Mary's, York, Swine, and Bridlington, and the deaneries of Bingham and Newark, and intended to visit the deaneries of Lonsdale, Amounderness, Furness and Cartmel, and Kendal. At the visitation of any deanery all the rectors, vicars, and priests of the churches and chapels in that deanery were to be present, and a list of their names was to be made ready by the rural dean. Three or four trustworthy parishioners were also to be summoned from each parish (no. 118).

The list which follows of the numerous districts into which the diocese of York was divided, will give some idea of the labour involved in a visitation, whether made by the archbishop or commissioners.

First of all there were the five archdeaconries :—

- (1) York, comprising the deanery of the Christianity of York, and the deaneries of the Ainsty, Pontefract, Craven, Doncaster and Rotherham.
- (2) Cleveland, comprising the deaneries of Cleveland, Bulmer, Ryedale and Whitby Strand.
- (3) The East Riding, comprising the deaneries of Buckrose, Dickering, Harthill and Holderness.

- (4) Nottingham, comprising the deaneries of Nottingham, Bingham, Newark, and Retford.
- (5) Richmond, comprising the deaneries of Richmond, Catterick and Boroughbridge ; and "ultra moras" (no. 998), comprising the deaneries of Amounderness, Cartmel and Furness, Coupland and Kendal.

In addition to the four great chapters of York, Beverley, Ripon and Southwell, with the chapel of St. Mary and the Holy Angels, there were certain spiritualities or jurisdictions, each with its dean or warden (custos), Howden, Allerton, Shirburn (Wickwane's Register, no. 817), Otley, Selby and Snaith, Scrooby, Hexham in Northumberland, and Churchdown in Gloucestershire.

The churches in the liberties of St. Peter's, York (scattered over the county), Scrooby and Southwell, and the provostry of Beverley, as well as the parish of Ripon with its chapels, were extra-ruridecanal. This is clearly shown in archbishop Lee's returns of 1538, which represent the arrangement which had prevailed for several centuries. The archbishops appointed deans at Beverley and Southwell, and most likely at Ripon ; but these deans probably had jurisdiction only over the archbishop's immediate tenants. The great chapters, like the archdeacon of Richmond, had the right of institution within their own liberties, and probably appointed their own local deans. Thus a large proportion of the York churches were outside the control of the dean of Christianity.

Unfortunately little or nothing is told of what took place at the visitations of any of these places except in the case of the Chapters and the Chapel. Commissions were issued to correct the comperta, but of the nature of the offences or the names of the delinquents nothing is stated.

Another class of visitations, that of the religious houses in the diocese, must have caused the archbishop much anxiety and occupied a considerable portion of his time. Fortunately the decrees or corrections made after nine of such visitations have been recorded. They are most valuable, as they afford trustworthy material from which it is possible to form some conclusions as to the spiritual and temporal condition of the religious houses at this period. Before noticing these decrees it is right to call the reader's attention to the fact that in many cases nothing more is recorded after the notice of the archbishop's intention, either in person or by commissioners, to make a visitation. To take the first year in the archdeaconry of York, notices of visitations were given for Sinningthwaite, Healaugh Park, Nostell, Bolton, Arthington, Drax and Selby, but there are decrees only for Selby, Arthington and Bolton, which are in all cases only concerned with their temporal affairs. The same holds good of the archdeaconry of Cleveland, where notices of visitations were issued for Guisborough, Whitby, Moxby, Marton and Newburgh, but these are decrees only for the last two places, and also of the archdeaconry of the East Riding, where three houses, Nunburnholme, Wykeham and Yedingham, were visited but no decrees made. In the populous and wealthy archdeaconry of Nottingham the tale is the same. There were notices of four visitations, but no decrees for any of them; the only decree being for Blyth, for the visitation of which house no notice has been recorded. For the ten years during which archbishop le Romeyn occupied the see of York, there are only decrees for a dozen houses, Arthington, Bolton, Selby, Monk Bretton, Drax, Newburgh, Marton, Bridlington, Warter, Shelford, Blyth (twice), and Newstead. This fact may fairly be cited as evidence that the religious houses in the diocese were well conducted, but it is not quite conclusive. First of all it must be remembered that the Cistercian and Cluniac houses, including such important ones as Fountains and Kirkstall, were exempt from visitation by the diocesan. Unluckily the records from Cîteaux, now in the Archives at Dijon, are so fragmentary as regards the English houses that there is no evidence as to their state at this time. The only visitation there is one of Warden abbey in Bedfordshire, made towards the end of the fifteenth century. Then it is very difficult to believe that all the decrees have been entered in the register. The condition of Thurgarton (nos. 702, 704) makes it almost certain that the archbishop found many matters, and very serious ones, requiring amendment, but the only recorded effect of the visitation is the vindication of the prior's character (no. 711). There is another class of cases where we should have expected to find decrees. When a house was ill spoken of there was, besides the visitation, an "inquisition," as at Sinningthwaite, Healaugh Park (no. 119), Bolton (no. 123), and Moxby (no. 443). However, except in the case of Bolton, there is no decree.

Other reasons may also be suggested why the decrees were not entered on the registers: (1) that the decrees were written on loose sheets, and, as the registers did not accompany the archbishop on his travels, they got omitted. (2) That they related to matters of only temporary interest, and were generally only entered when useful as common forms for the benefit of the registrar and his successors in the work of composition.

The most important house affected by these decrees was the great Benedictine abbey of Selby. In archbishop Wickwane's time (Wickwane's Register, no. 75) its reputation had been very bad, but when visited by his successor, some seven years later, there was so little to reprehend that it was only necessary to repeat archbishop Gray's injunctions, made in 1233, which, with the exception of not appointing bursars and cellarers, seems to have been duly observed.

The fullest decrees are those made for Bridlington and Shelford, both houses of Austin canons. At Bridlington (no. 561) there is evidence of great laxity. Several of the most important rules of the order were unobserved. Not only were seculars allowed free access to the cloister, but even in the frater unsuitable persons gained admittance. The solemnity of the religious life was destroyed by the presence of buffoons from the neighbouring town of Bridlington, whose conversation gave rise to unseemly quarrels. One class of guests, whom the archbishop forbade as unsuitable and absurd, were persons one would have least expected in a religious house. These were Jews, who three years later were expelled from the kingdom in return for a subsidy of a fifteenth from the laity and a tenth from the clergy.<sup>1</sup> Worst of all, women, the medieval monks' bête noire, had been permitted to lodge in the house, nuns as well as seculars, which excited the scribe's astonishment, as at this place he has written the word "memorandum" in the margin to draw attention to the fact. The only exception to the rule against the admission of females allowed by the archbishop was in the case of great ladies whom it would be impolitic to turn away.<sup>2</sup> The condition

<sup>2</sup>It is even more astonishing to find that married people were received as boarders at Elstow nunnery, near Bedford, in the earlier half of the fifteenth century. There is one case in the Lincoln Registers of nuns staying in religious houses of men. In 1442 a nun of Catesby priory went on a trip to Northampton and spent the night with the

of the canons themselves was very unsatisfactory. Besides breaking the rules about keeping silence and not receiving gifts,<sup>1</sup> which were very generally infringed in most religious houses, they were in the habit of going outside the cloister without leave, encouraged thereto by the absence of the subprior, to whose custody the place was committed. Unnecessary and suspicious means of exit favoured evasions of this kind.

The cloister was ever regarded as the monk's home, and confinement there as a sure remedy for all monastic faults. To derive as much benefit as possible from the atmosphere of the cloister some of the canons who had transgressed the rule of their order were forbidden to leave it for considerable periods, in the case of two canons for as long as a year. In many other respects there was room for amendment. The monks' old clothes and conventual alms, which should have been given to the poor, were diverted to less worthy objects. The sick were ill cared for, and the business affairs of the house administered in a wasteful way. The cause of all the troubles was, no doubt, want of personal supervision on the part of the prior, who neither slept in the dorter nor was present at the conventual chapters, besides being partial in administering justice.

At Shelford priory (no. 747), which, like Bridlington, had been ill spoken of in the time of archbishop Wickwane (Wickwane's Register, no. 436), the report was even more unfavourable. This was not to be wondered at, as the prior not only was negligent in the discharge of his duties and otherwise unsatisfactory, but was a drunkard and wasted the convent's property. The subprior was on bad terms with him, and, contrary to the rules of his order, indulged in trade. Here, too, canons were in the habit of going out of the cloister without leave, instead of fixing their attention on divine service and reading books. The cloister itself was not shut till after compline, and had become a place of resort for seculars. A door into it, which should have been closed in archbishop Wickwane's time, still remained open.

Austin friars, saltando et citharizando, and, not content with this, went on next night to the Black friars and enjoyed herself in the same way. At Nun Appleton (no. 248), a Cistercian nunnery, the archbishop's mandate seems to apply to both sexes.

<sup>1</sup>Amongst Austin canons a certain kind of proprietorship was recognized. In one case (no. 725), where a canon was received back, the archbishop ordered that the goods which he had possessed before he left were to be restored, or, if wasted, replaced.

The food in the infirmary which ought to have been bestowed on sick canons was given to seculars. To remedy this abuse the archbishop enacted that no seculars should have their meals there, except under medical advice and with the licence of the presiding officer.

An excellent example of the careful way in which the archbishop supervised the conduct of the inmates of religious houses in his diocese, is illustrated by the case of Roger of Sowerby. This man was not, strictly speaking, a religious at all, only a "conversus" or lay brother of the Augustine priory of Newburgh. He came from Sowerby near Thirsk, where that priory had considerable property. Roger had got into trouble by forsaking his work and leading a disreputable life in the outside world. With a view to saving him from further sin the archbishop wrote a letter to his convent requesting he might be received back, and undergo a penance suitable to his demerits (no. 435). At the visitation of the house by the archbishop some six months later (no. 447), it appears he was to be sent to work on the canons' grange at Hood, near Thirsk, where there are still remains of medieval buildings, and to be employed in agriculture and ploughing, holding the plough-tail (caudam aratri teneat) as the original expresses it, and so save the expense of a hired man. On Wednesdays and Fridays he was to have nothing but bread, beer and vegetables. He was to receive a "disciplina" thrice a week, and make his confession once at least. This penance was to continue till he showed signs of amendment. If he proved unamenable he was to be expelled. Three months later the report of his conduct was unfavourable and an inquiry was ordered as to his conduct (no. 500). Unluckily the answer has not been preserved.

Witchcraft, not altogether unknown amongst religious persons, as is shown by the case of the abbot of Selby (Wickwane's Register, p. 24), who was deposed for that and other crimes, occurs once as a transgression on the part of an apostate monk. Godfrey Darel, a cadet, no doubt of the Darel's of Sessay, now represented by Lord Downe, who still owns that ancestral property, had fled from Rievaulx, and was wandering about attired like a layman. In an ordinary case the archbishop would not have interfered, as Darel, being a member of a Cistercian monastery, was exempt from his jurisdiction, but being an apostate monk he would lose his claim to such exemption. There are many cases on the Patent Rolls of the secular power being called in to bring such monks back. Darel's was a particularly bad case. He deceived the Lord's flock by sorcery and incantation, and rejecting the Christian faith, made thereby a wreck of his own salvation and became a scandal to all right-thinking people (no. 437).

One of the chief troubles in medieval monasteries was poverty, caused, or at least aggravated, in the case of the smaller houses and nunneries by unbusinesslike management, which must have placed the inmates very much in the power of their agents and servants. Even some of the great houses, as was the case with Fountains (Memorials of Fountains (Surtees Soc. xlii) i, 179) at this time, were nearly ruined by the unskilful way their affairs were administered, so much so as to make them an object of derision to their more sagacious secular neighbours. In almost every decree there are injunctions for yearly audits of the conventual accounts and against the improvident disposition of the monastic property, especially by grants of corrodies, under which the grantee was boarded, lodged, and clothed for life at the expense of the convent. Here the temptation was the lump sum which the sale of the corrody brought in. Many houses are noted in this register as being in difficulties. At Drax (no. 245) the canons, to relieve their poverty, were permitted to serve the church of Bingley by a priest instead of by a member of their own body, and at Nun Appleton and Nunkeeling (nos. 386, 674), the nuns' indigence so moved the archbishop that he wrote a letter to try and get them excused from contributing to a subsidy which was being then levied.

The usual method of extricating religious houses from their difficulties was by the appointment of some neighbouring clergyman<sup>1</sup> to manage their secular affairs, in the belief that his knowledge of business, acquired by intercourse with the world from which the religious were excluded, would soon place the house in a satisfactory position. Except Monk Bretton (no. 293), where the rector of Sandal was appointed assistant to the prior and convent, all the houses placed under tutelage were inhabited by nuns. Sinningthwaite and Wilberfoss (nos. 218, 672) were managed by the rectors of Kirk Deighton and Sutton-on-Derwent. The rector of Kippax was guardian and curator at Arthington (no. 345), and the vicars of Thirkleby and Bossall masters in succession at Moxby (nos. 436, 513). The affairs of Swine were committed to the care of a Premonstratensian canon from Croxton in Leicestershire (no. 565), and afterwards of a canon from the Trinitarian house of St. Robert of Knaresborough (no. 615).

An excellent example of a class of obstacles, sometimes encountered by the diocesan in supervising the religious houses in his diocese, is afforded by the priory of Blyth in Nottinghamshire. This house was a cell of the Benedictine abbey of the Holy Trinity (Mont-Ste-Cathérine), Rouen. It is not clear how Blyth came to occupy this dependent position, which was fully admitted by the archbishop (no. 762). The Reverend James Raine in his account of the place only mentions the French house once, namely, at the foundation in 1189,<sup>1</sup> when a yearly rent of 40s. of English money was charged by the founder, Roger de Bully, upon the possessions of the newly established house in favour of the church of the Holy Trinity of the Mount, Rouen. Unless this rent-charge was sufficient to place Blyth under the domination of the French monastery there must have been some unrecorded transaction under which the English house became subordinate to the foreign one.<sup>2</sup>

However that may have been, this subjection to a foreign monastery outside the archbishop's jurisdiction was a constant source of trouble. With the view of giving the priory some kind of independent status the archbishop intimated to the abbot of the Holy Trinity that he would allow no prior of Blyth to be removed without his sanction (no. 739). The foreign nationality of many of the monks gave rise to another difficulty. As was natural, they were constantly longing to go back to their native land. Losing hope of return they became slack in their devotions and bore the yoke imposed upon them by the observance of their rule very reluctantly. The archbishop proposed as a remedy that their sojourn in the English house should not exceed four or five years at most (no. 842). Whatever the cause, the character of nearly all the monks about whom we have any information was very unsatisfactory. It looks as if the mother house drafted her most objectionable members into her English dependency. In 1286 Thomas Russel, a Blyth monk, was found unbearable, and his stay fraught with danger to the spiritual health of himself and his brother monks. He was sent back to the principal monastery of which Blyth was a member, there to undergo suitable penance (no. 730). Two years later another monk, Robert de Angerville, also proved himself equally unbearable and had to be sent back as his stay was having a bad effect on the other monks' devotions. In the letter about Angerville the archbishop earnestly besought the abbot of the Rouen monastery to be careful and only send brethren who took a delight in the holiness of the religious life, and who by their living according to their rule would gain a good report for the mother house (no. 762). A somewhat sinister light is thrown on the character of the monks sent to Blyth by the heading to the last named document, which shows it was to be used as a common form, and proves that the archbishop anticipated that there would be constant need for letters of this description. Angerville's stay at Rouen can have been only brief. In 1291 the archbishop again sent him back and informed the abbot that no monks were to be received at Blyth without his permission (no. 842). John de Belleville was another unruly monk, whose absence was more desirable than his company. At first (no. 797) the archbishop tried to get rid of him on the ground the English climate did not suit him. This plea proving unsuccessful he was sent back as being past doing with and very quarrelsome (no. 842). Not only did this priory suffer by having undesirables forced upon it, but when a monk was likely to prove useful he was recalled to France. This was attempted in the case of two monks, William Burdun, the prior, an Englishman, and Nicholas de Bretteville, a Frenchman, who had deserved the archbishop's encomiums by their services to their house. It is pleasant to find that the archbishop's opposition to their removal was successful, and, in 1303, on the resignation of Burdun he was succeeded by Bretteville.<sup>1</sup> To prevent anything of such a kind happening archbishop Corbridge ordered that no mandate from the French house to send a monk across the sea was to be obeyed except by his special leave.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup>The devolution of the patronage of this house is very perplexing. In 1189 John, earl of Mortain, afterwards the king, granted the chapelry of Blyth (Bl'ia) to the archbishop of Rouen. This grant was confirmed by Richard I, Geoffrey, archbishop of York, and pope

Clement III. A little later John repeated his grant at greater length, enumerating all the churches and other endowments of the chapelry (Calendar of Documents (France), nos. 46—49, 61). Nothing is shown what right John had to make the grant or why the archbishop was unable to retain possession of it.

In regard to another important portion of his flock the archbishop had many difficulties to contend with. The old scandal of persons not in priest's orders being instituted to parish churches still continued. The following abstract of the institutions during his episcopate in the two most important arch-deaconries in the diocese will give a good idea of the state of affairs at this period.

	York.		Nottingham.

Out of 178 institutions less than a half, 71, were in priest's orders, or even with the addition of the eight chaplains the moiety is not nearly reached. This state was regarded as more or less normal. In no. 699 is a common form of dimissory letters for beneficed clergy. In this particular case the presentee seems not to have been ordained at all. The archbishop himself was not blameless. At Rotherham and Darfield (nos. 210, 214) he collated subdeacons, and at St. George's, York (no. 146), a clerk, presumably not in holy orders. Persons thus appointed without proper canonical qualifications, were, it may be assumed, generally young, whose education was still incomplete. This rendered it necessary for them to obtain leave of absence to pursue their studies, frequently for terms as long as three years.<sup>3</sup> The parson was, it is true, enjoined to see that the divine services were duly carried on, and the cure of souls in no wise neglected, but his absence for so long a period must have been very prejudicial to the parish. The archbishop was entitled to a fourth part of the living, and compelled the parson to appoint a proctor to answer in his place.<sup>1</sup> Citations to receive institution (nos. 417, 525, 687), and to compel the parsons to shew the dispensations under which they claimed to hold more than one living with cure of souls (no. 136, 979), are evidence of the archbishop's determination to make his clergy obey the ecclesiastical law. There was another parochial evil the archbishop endeavoured to ameliorate (nos. 137, 979), the impropriation of parish churches both by seculars and regulars, though the latter were the chief offenders. Here, where no vicarage had been ordained, the impropiator took all the income of the living and only paid a small sum, to be agreed upon between the impropiator and the stipendiary priest, for doing duty as curate in the parish. This curate not being instituted was removable at the pleasure of the impropiator. The "simplex presbyter" whom the archbishop sanctioned at Bingley (no. 245) was merely a curate, as the object of the document was to relieve the canons of Drax temporarily of the payment of a vicar's stipend.

Non-residence, especially in colleges of secular canons, was very rife. The Chapel of the Holy Sepulchre, otherwise St. Mary and the Holy Angels, notwithstanding its close proximity to York Minster, was no exception. The archbishop's description of its inmates is uncomplimentary:—"Ut solvantur stipendia, ministri, nudo nomine tantum, modo se sollicitos exhibent, qui debitum ministerium raro prebent; mercedem exigunt qui in vinea non laborant; emolumentum siciunt qui onera non agnoscunt; sicque honori Divino irreventer detrahitur, patrimonium Christi inutiliter consumitur, ac indebita stipendia percipiens miserabiliter decipitur, ad quorum restitutionem jure poli forsitan obligatur."<sup>2</sup> The same language is used of the canons at Ripon (no. 1069). At Beverley a fresh arrangement was made under which a residence of twenty-four weeks was made compulsory (no. 1099). Many parochial clergy, in one archdeaconry at least (no. 979), were cited for non-residence. There are but few scandalous clergy mentioned. The vicar of Bingham was by far the worst, and long continued a cause of offence in his parish (nos. 735, 750). This parish was unfortunate in its pastors, as the rector was also in trouble for immorality (no. 901). Roger Swayn, a canon of Ripon and employed more than once on important duties, is an example of a cleric, not having a cure of souls, who sinned in this respect and was compelled to enter into a bond not to repeat his offence (no. 1020). Usury was the charge laid against the rector of Kneeton (no. 892), but as he had leave to study the next year, it is permissible to believe he was found not guilty. The question of dilapidations troubled the clergy, as it still does. Besides the chancel and houses the rector was liable for any defects in the books or ornaments of the church (nos. 813, 814). The register gives very little architectural information. At Ripon (no. 14) the church was stated to be in a ruinous condition. At Southwell (nos. 1058, 1110) the canons rated themselves to the erection of their chapterhouse which still remains the glory of that Minster. The other notices refer to edifices which, with two exceptions, have disappeared. The new chapel at Stainer near Selby (no. 5) has left no trace of its existence. Fire was the cause of trouble at Humberston abbey, the Austin Friars, Huntingdon, and the cathedrals of Carlisle and Whithorn. At Whithorn portions, and at Carlisle a great deal, of the buildings then existing are still visible. At Carlisle the present quire was begun immediately after the fire; the outer walls escaped in great part, but the arches of the nave were underpinned and new columns built up beneath them, as can be seen to-day. It is difficult to believe that the churches in the deaneries of Ryedale and Bulmer (no. 463), which were undedicated in 1287, were newly built. In the cases of Scawton and Oswaldkirk it certainly was not the case. It is much more probable that they had been polluted by shedding of blood, or that a new high altar had been erected, or that the dedication feast had fallen into disuse and the dedication became doubtful, and that for one of these reasons they required dedication. There is one section (nos. 1-26) peculiar to this register, the indulgences and briefs, which are here gathered together and not scattered about as in other registers. In the indulgences<sup>1</sup> the faithful were promised a certain number of days remission from the penance which might have been enjoined upon them, on condition of fulfilling certain conditions, such as attending sermons, going on pilgrimage, contributing to the building or repair of churches and bridges, giving to hospitals, and above all by praying for the dead. The archbishop by no means confined his briefs or licences to beg to his own country. Hospitals at Rome, Altopascio, near Lucca, and Vienne in Southern France, probably used by English pilgrims on their way to Rome, received his recommendations. Perhaps the most curious brief is that to the chapter of Bethlehem. The bishop had long been divorced from his see, which had been lost when Saladin conquered Palestine at the end of the twelfth century. The bishop then removed his see to Clamecy (Nièvre) between Auxerre and Nevers. Here his see was confined to the hospital so it is difficult to understand why he needed a chapter with so very small a diocese. This anomalous jurisdiction continued to the time of the French revolution.

In conclusion it is again the editor's pleasant task to return thanks for free access to the original register so kindly accorded to him by the late registrar, Mr. H. A. Hudson, and continued by his son and successor. To Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson he is under great obligation for much assistance and advice. To him are due the notes derived from the Calendars of Patent Rolls and Papal Registers and the Registers of the Bishops of Lincoln.

The manor of Corby descended to the descendants of Alice Ledet and William Latimer: their son William died in 1335, leaving an heir William, aged 5 (Chanc. Inq. p.m. Edw. iii., file 44, no. 6), fourth Baron Latimer, who died in 1381. His widow married a Neville, in whom or in his son the barony of Latimer was revived. John Latimer, Christine's husband, died before Dec. 12, 1282 (Chanc. Inq. p.m. Edw. i., file 35, no. 1). Their son Thomas disputed the presentation to the church of Corby with his uncle William in 1297-8 (Sutton, Inst., fo. 63d): he also occurs as claiming rights in the manor of Little Weldon, Northants (Placita de Q.W., p. 574). Thomas Furnival, the father of Gerard, was living in 1269, and his son was dead before 1280. It is doubtful whether Sir Gerard Furnival was Christine's own son or merely a step-son. If her son, he must have been a very small child in 1286—unless she was first married to a Furnival. She was eleven years old at the time of

Henry of Braybrooke's death, which must have been before 1240 ; but unfortunately the writ for his Inq. p.m. is missing, and the inquisition is undated, and there are one or two difficulties about it which are hard to solve. (A.H.T.)

P. 17, no. 32. Master Geoffrey Asphale or Haspalde, master of St. Leonard's Hospital, York, got his name from Aspall in Suffolk. The road from Debenham to Eye passes through the parish. He is one of the few East Anglians occurring in this register. It was in his character of Master that he was interested in Saxton church (no. 156), which was appropriated to that hospital.

P. 18, no. 34. Master John of Craucumbe probably came from Crowcombe, near Taunton, in archb. Giffard's old diocese of Bath and Wells. This is borne out by his appointment of William de Bikenaller, from Bicknoller in the same neighbourhood, as one of his attorneys when he was going abroad in the king's service in 1294 (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, (1292-1301) p. 98). He was one of Giffard's clerks in 1270 (Reg. Giffard, no. 720), was presented to the church of Feliskirk in 1272, and still held it in 1279 when it was appropriated to the Hospitallers (Ibid., no. 169). In the same year he received the prebend of Grindale vacated by Robert of Scarborough (Reg. Wickwane, no. 8), and was a little later appointed Wickwane's official (Ibid., no. 495). On Jan. 23, 1279-80, in succession to Robert of Scarborough, he was collated to the archdeaconry of the East Riding (Ibid., no. 13). He went to Rome with archb. le Romeyn in 1285 (Cal. of Pat. Rolls (1281-1292), p. 198), and took part in the second election of the archbishop as one of the electors appointed by the pope. He shared the confidence of archb. le Romeyn as of archbishops Giffard and Wickwane, and acted as his vicar-general during his absence in Italy in 1292 (Infra, no. 632). After that time he seems to have become closely attached to the royal service. In June, 1294, he was sent abroad on the king's service (Cal. of Pat. Rolls (1292-1301), p. 74), and in November went with Gerard de Vispeyns, archdeacon of Richmond, as a royal envoy to the Curia (Ibid., p. 105). On Dec. 11, 1295, he is mentioned as parson of Goxhill (Gousle) in Lincolnshire, Mappleton, (? Cherry) Burton, Weaverthorpe, Kirby Grindalyth (Grendale), Burton (Byrton ? Burton Joyce), and Axminster (Ayminstre) (Ibid., p. 213). He was instituted to Goxhill, May 17, 1287, on the presentation of the prior and convent of Bridlington, on the death of Alan of Grinton (Grenton). On inquisition it was found that Master John was "alibi beneficiatus." He exhibited two dispensations from Honorius iv., and was instituted and admitted (Reg. Sutton, Lincoln Roll, anno 8). The dispensations are given on the dorse of the roll; by one, dated Feb. 22, 1285-6, he was allowed to hold the church of Birton on Trent, York diocese (Burton Joyce, Notts.), commended to him before the Council of Lyons, with his archdeaconry, canonry, and prebend in the church of York. On June 12, 1294, Master John de Craucumbe, in minor orders, presented by the prior and convent of Drax to a mediety of the church of Roxby in North Lincolnshire, was ordained subdeacon and instituted at the Old Temple, London (Reg. Sutton, fo. 38d). On March 26, 1296, he and Robert of Pickering brought the news of le Romeyn's death to the king at Wark-on-Tweed and were granted a congé d'élire (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, 1292-1301, p. 185). He seems to have died in 1308 (Le Neve, iii., 142, 190).

P. 110, no. 296. Trinity Term, 22 Edward i. (1294). The prioress of Apelton v. Henry, parson of Rithere, for five marks, arrears of a yearly rent of that amount. There had been a controversy in the time of Richard i. between the prioress's predecessor, Maude, and William de Rythre about the advowson of Rythre. Maude released all claim to the advowson, and William, with the assent of Robert, the then parson, granted the rent to the nuns of Apelton, and it had been paid ever since. The agreement had been confirmed by archb. Walter. The prioress produced a fine of 1 Richard i. Judgment for the prioress. (Assize Roll, no. 1085, m. 13).

Same date. An assize was taken to ascertain whether ten acres of land and five acres and one rood of meadow in Rither were the "libera elemosina" of Rither church, of which Henry de Holm was parson, or the lay fee of William de Rither and Lucy, his wife. Verdict for the parson (Ibid., m. 65). On m. 15 the parson is called Henry de Ryther of Holm. He had been in the household of bishop Bek of Durham (Wickwane's Register, p. 315).

P. 113, no. 307. Michaelmas, 21 Edward i. (1293). An assize was taken to ascertain whether a messuage in Aberford

The parson said that William de Derlton, his predecessor, was in seisin of it in right of his church in the present king's time. Verdict for the parson. He also recovered a messuage and a bovate of land in Aberford and Parlington against Richard Moyesone of Aberford, of which his predecessor, Robert Gramayre, had been seised in the time of Henry iii. P. 139, note. The dates of nos. 384, 385 must be 1293. The commission to enclose the lady bears date May 28, 1294. The preliminary commission of inquiry must therefore be earlier (Sept. 6, 1293). Probably the clerks omitted to copy in the two commissions of inquiry issued at Otley on that date, and, putting in one with the commission which was its consequence, added in the other (no. 384) as well. The draft of one had perhaps been made on the dorse of the other, and the sheet had been overlooked. They ought, however, to have made a note as to the proper year of nos. 384, 385; probably they were slow in posting up the register, and did not bother about examining the dates too closely. Cf. no. 384 with 392; the affair of Keighley seems to have been settled by Aug. 25, 1294.

P. 191, no. 546. This is possibly the earliest mention of Robert of Barlby, one of the greatest lawyers of the later part of the reign of Edward i. He and Adam of Osgodby seem to have been William of Hambleton's chief disciples in the Chancery, as Hambleton had been Burnell's. Robert was with Hambleton when he died at Fountains abbey on the morrow of St. Tiburtius and Valerian (April 15), 1305, "before the dawning of the day," and carried the great seal to London ; and probably for an interval in Edward ii.'s reign he discharged the duties of chancellor. In 1311 Barlby resigned the rectory of Bridford, Exeter diocese (Reg. Stapeldon, ed. Randolph, p. 196). He was instituted by proxy to the rectory of Gedney in Lincoln diocese, June 13, 1314, when he himself appears to have been with Edward ii. on the Bannockburn campaign (*Inst. An assize was taken to ascertain whether two messuages, sixteen acres of land, one acre of meadow, and half an acre of wood in Wynteworth were the "libera elemosina" of the church of Wath by Roderham, of which Roger de Poklington was parson, or the lay fee of Roger, son of Richard de Wynteworth, William Attekirkyard, and Henry le Bercher of Thorpe. Pymotus, formerly parson, had been seised thereof in right of the church. Verdict against the parson on the ground that he was already in seisin of divers rents paid by the defendants in respect of the land claimed. (Assize Roll, no. 1084, m. 43d).

P. 241, l. 8. The date of this document is probably about April 21 or 22, 1286 (nos. 10, 23).

P. 248, no. 715, note 1. The proper date may be May 22 (11 kal. Junii). The archb. was at Bessacar on the 20th and had reached Cawood four days later (nos. 712, 713).

Ibid., no. 715, l. 16. The itinerary makes it practically impossible for the archbishop to have been at Ripon on Feb. 22, as he was at Bishop Burton on Feb. 21 and 23 in 1292-3 (nos. 498, 649). It is, however, right for the fourth year (no. 972).

P. 277, note 3. "Jacobus Otonis de Urbe" was Jacopo, son of Oddo Colonna. Gregorovius (Gesch. Stadt Rom., Eng. trans., v., 541n) gives a pedigree of this branch of the Colonnas. Jacopo (cardinal 1278, made his will at Avignon, 1318) was the eldest son of Oddo, and was regarded at this time as head of the house. See nos. 1082 and 1124. John de Columpna, treasurer of York by papal provision June 11, 1292 (Cal. P.R., (1292-1301) p. 493), was provided to the prebend of Oxtun at Southwell in 1289 (no. 1072 inf.), and offered the prebend of Givendale at York in 1293 (no. 1148 inf.), was the son of Landolfo Colonna, probably identical with Landolfo, a younger brother of Jacopo. He was deprived of his preferments in or before 1297 as a result of the excommunication of the house of Colonna by Boniface viii., May 23, 1297. Odo, son of John de Columna, deprived of Cropredy prebend in Lincoln (probably out of place in Le Neve, ii., 139) is perhaps Oddo, youngest son of the senator Giovanni Colonna, second son of Oddo the elder. See no. 1165.

On May 21 a mandate was issued to the archbishop of Canterbury to cause the king's chancellor or any other wrongful holder of the prebend of York held by the late canon Bono (sic) de Clara, which the pope had given to John son of Landulph de Colonna, to give up the same to the said John or his proctor, within fifteen days, failing this, to cite them to appear before the pope within twelve months. (Cal. P.L., i., 578). Landolfo Colonna, John's father, had taken part with Boniface viii. against his elder brother Jacopo; and so possibly his clerical son came in for reward. The family was divided: the three younger brothers, Oddo, Matteo (provost of St. Omer) and Landolfo taking part against Jacopo and their nephews, the sons of the senator Giovanni. The eldest of these latter was Pietro, cardinal of Sant' Eustachio, 1288.

Pietro was deprived of the treasurership of York in 1297, when Boniface viii. provided Theobald (see no. 1170) "brother of the count of Bar" to the canonry, prebend, and treasurership thus voided. A mandate to induct and defend Theobald in possession bears date Orvieto, July 18, 1297. (Cal. P.L., i., 572).

Probably Le Neve has mixed up Pietro, Jacopo, and Giovanni. These are the relationships:—

The Giovanni Colonna whom Le Neve (ii., 49, 176) represents as holding preferment at Lincoln is called (Reg. Sutton, Inst. fo. 149) the son of Giovanni, brother of Pietro, cardinal deacon of St. Eustace. He was, therefore, a different person from the canon of Southwell and treasurer of York, and his father was John of St. Vito, son of John the senator and nephew of cardinal Jacopo. This Giovanni was provided to a prebend in Lincoln; Leighton Manor being assigned to his proctor July 21, 1294 (Reg. Sutton, u.s.). He was collated by provision to the archdeaconry of Huntingdon, Jan. 23, 1294-5 (Ibid., fo. 150), but appears to have voided both archdeaconry and prebend in the course of the next year or so (Ibid., ff. 150, 152). A.H.T.

P. 279, note 2. The prebendary of Brixworth in Salisbury, who was also chancellor of Sarum, also was instituted to his church by the bishop of Lincoln. Possibly this difficulty with Lincoln was due to an attempt of the bishop and dean and chapter to assert rights over their prebendal churches in York diocese equivalent to those possessed by the chapters of York, Southwell, etc., which instituted to their own benefices. It is difficult to imagine any other excuse.

P. 281, l. 12 from bottom. A new ordination of Bradbusk was made by Sir John de Heriz, son of Sir John de H., Tuesday before St. Wilfrid (Oct. 7), 1326, and confirmed at Southwell the Thursday following (Reg. Melton, fo. 359). By this the right of institution of the master was conceded to the archb., the mastership having previously been donative. The appointment of the other two chaplains was apparently reserved to the patron in his lifetime, but after his death passed to the master of the hospital. The chaplains lived together, but celebrated in Gonalston church as well as in the hospital chapel. The chantry certificate returned in 1546 mentions only one priest, who celebrated at Gonalston three times a week, but otherwise at Brodbusk.

P. 286, note 2. If this is the same person as the vicar of Cuckney he must have entered Welbeck after 1282.

P. 290, l. 12. For nostor read noster.

P. 294, l. 14 from bottom. Geoffrey is an error of the scribe for Gilbert. See Wickwane's Register, p. 301, and no. 711 supra. In 1311 he was appointed prior of Hexham, but was obliged to resign in a very short time owing to the hostility of the canons of that house (The Priory of Hexham (Surtees Soc., xliv.) i., app. p.1.).

P. 300, l. 13. For introduction read induction.

P. 301, l. 8. For Kegworth read Keggeworth.

Ibid., l. 14. For sacristan read sacrist.

P. 303, l. 3. For transfutacione read transfretacione.

P. 309. No. 880. John le Palmere of Nottingham and Alice, his wife, had licence, April 16, 1303, to found two chantries in the chapel of our Lady on Hethebethe Bridge (Trent Bridge, Nottingham). These were eventually founded by Alice after her husband's death, together with a chantry in Stapleford church for the soul of Sir Hugh de Stapelford' and her own, for which she had royal licence Dec. 16, 1319. The licences and foundation deeds were inspected and confirmed by archb. Melton, who ordained the chantries at Cawood, Aug. 25, 1322 (Reg. Melton, ff. 347d, 348). Sir Hugh must have been Alice Palmer's father, or else a first husband who died young.

P. 312, note 1, l. 10. Sutton Passeys was a chapelry in Radford parish. John Colyer of Nottingham founded a chantry of our Lady in Sutton Passeys chapel by letters patent of Oct. 8, 1342, which was confirmed by archb. Zouche at Bishop Burton, Feb. 26, 1344-5 (Reg. Zouche, ff. 113d, 114). The Black Death probably depopulated Sutton Passeys, and the chantry lands, which were situated there, ceased to produce an income; for letters patent were granted in 1358 to Richard de Wylughby the elder to assign property in Nottingham to a chantry priest in the chapel (Cal. Pat. Rolls (1358-61), p. 120). This chantry was at a later date removed to Wollaton church, but was still popularly known at the suppression of chantries as the chantry of Sutton Passeys (Chantry Cert. Roll, 37). The hamlet probably never recovered from the pestilence, and was therefore non-existent when its site, which was near the present Wollaton colliery, in the N.W. part of the park, was enclosed in Wollaton Park.

P. 340, no. 976, l. 4. Horneby. The place would suit 2 nonas Dec., but not 2 idus Dec. Probably there is an error in the register. On Dec. 3 the archb. visited at Richmond (no. 975); on Dec. 6 he was at Ripon (no. 977). This would allow him to be at Hornby on Dec. 4. On Dec. 11 and Dec. 13, however, he was at Otley (no. 978, 979), which would hardly allow for a visit to Hornby on Dec. 12.

Ibid., l. 9 from bottom. Lawton, in his Collections (p. 540), states that the church of Marton with Grafton (three miles S.S.E. of Boroughbridge) was appropriated to the priory of Marton. This is undoubtedly an error for the priory of Malton, as is proved by the above entry. The church of the Blessed Mary of Marton was given to the hospital for the poor at the head of Norton bridge by Roger de Flamaville (Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, vi., 971). Roger's son Hugh confirmed his father's gift of the church of Marton in Burgershire (Tanner's Notitia Monastica, p. 662). In the Minister's Accounts (Monast. Anglic., vi., 974) a rent of 7*li* 6*s* 0*d* was paid to Malton priory for the rectory of Marton in Burgshyre.

Letters testimonial of the ordination of John of Selby by archb. Wickwane and the bp. of Carlisle.

<sup>1</sup>Margaret, queen of France (d. 1295), was the widow of St. Louis: she survived him many years, and died in a convent. She was one of the four daughters of Raymond Berenger iv, Count of Provence (d. 1245). His other daughters were Beatrice, who married Charles of Anjou, brother of St. Louis; Eleanor, who married our Henry iii; and Sancha, who married Richard, Earl of Cornwall, Henry's brother. Margaret was born 1219, married 1234.

Similar letters, that, on inspection of the same register, it was found that Clement de Melton had been ordained priest by the bishop of Carlisle, "ipso predecessore nostro tunc in remotis agente."

Similar letters that on Saturday in Ember Days in Whit Week (May 19), 1286,<sup>1</sup> in the conventual church of Healaugh Park (Parci de Helawe), Nicholas de Mardefelde, subdeacon, rector of a mediety of the church of Wodeforde,<sup>2</sup> Lincoln diocese, had been ordained deacon by arch. le Romeyn by letters dimissory from O., bishop of Lincoln.

Similar letters that, on inspection of the register of archb. W., it appeared that Thomas de Foxholes had been ordained deacon by R., bishop of Carlisle, the archbishop being away from his diocese, deacon by the same bishop, the see being vacant; and priest by archb. le Romeyn at the ordination on Saturday in Ember Days, in Whit Week, 1286, in the conventual church of Healaugh Park.

Similar letters "fidei testimonio perhibente," that Gregory de Colevile of Gothemundham had been ordained subdeacon, deacon, and priest by archb. William.

Quocirca devocioni tue injungimus et mandamus quatinus, si est ita, prefatum G. moneas efficaciter et inducas, ut predictae proli sue pro viribus facultatum alimenta necessaria subministret ;

<sup>1</sup>Ember Saturday in Whit-week, 1286, fell on May 19. The date presents some difficulty. There is no other notice of the ordination in the register; and the archb., who had been at Laneham for some time on his way north, was at Retford on the 19th (no. 711), and at Bessacarr, near Doncaster, on the 20th (nos. 712, 1209). Either Healaugh Park is an error for Blyth, which seems a more likely place; or the ordination took place a week later than the date mentioned. The archb. in any case cannot have been at Healaugh Park in person on the 19th.

<sup>2</sup>The chapel of Catterton (in that part of Tadcaster parish lying in the Ainsty) seems to have disappeared. There is no mention of it in the Chantry Surveys ; but the chapel of St. John Baptist at Tadcaster Town's End is there mentioned (Yorkshire Chantry Surveys (Surt. Soc., 92), ii., 225.)

Perhaps, as trans-Wharfine Tadcaster increased, a new chapel was built nearer to the centre of population, and Catterton chapel was allowed to fall into decay.

<sup>1</sup> The recipient of this letter, William de Corneria or de la Corner, bishop of Salisbury 1289-1291, died some time before Nov. 8, when licence was given to elect his successor. He had been beneficed in York diocese, where he had held the canonry of Barnby (Le Neve's Fasti iii. 170), the precentorship in York Minster (collated 1283), and the church of Skipwith (Wickwane's Register, p. 332). As far back as 1270 archb. Giffard (Register, no. 102) had ordered William de Ryparia to be inducted into the church of Barnby-on-Don. Deficiency in the requisite orders was probably the reason of his not having been instituted. There was a family of de Rypariis, which held property at Culliford, near Weymouth, in Salisbury diocese; or, it is possible, William de Ryparia may have been a member of the family of de la River which was seated at Brandsby near Easingwold, from an early period.

<sup>1</sup>The appropriation of Harswell and the chapels of Brayton to Selby seems to have been by way of compensation for the contemplated appropriation of Brayton to the archdeaconry of York. See no. 650 for the further history of this transaction. Harswell had been appropriated to Sulby Abbey, a Premonstratensian house, Northants., 6 miles N.W. of Market Harborough. On July 28, 1293, it was found by inquisition that it would not prejudice the king or anyone else if leave were given to the abbey of Sulby to give the advowson of the chapel of Hersewelle to Selby Abbey (Yorkshire Inquisitions, ii., 152). In (al. of Patent Rolls (1225-1232, p. 174), there is a note of the presentation in 1228 of the elder le Romeyn to the incumbency of the chapel of Hampsthwaite. Lawton notes that Hampsthwaite was a chapel of Aldbrough; and in Taxatio Papæ Nicholai it occurs as a benefice in Boroughbridge deanery. Later (but when or how is not clear) it passed into the deanery of Ainsty, and only was restored to the archdeaconry of Richmond in 1905, when the deanery of Nidderdale (a most incongruous mess of mutilated parishes) was founded.

<sup>1</sup>This date must be wrong, or else Etale must be an error for Totenhale. The archb. was at Totenhale through the greater parts of April and May, 1293; see nos. 886 (May 18) 316, 341, and no. 1384 (May 24). He cannot, therefore, have been at Etal on May 23, 1293. He was probably at Etal on May 23, 1291; but this date is too early to coincide with that of the document alluded to here.

<sup>2</sup>See no. 340. John de Kirkby, bishop of Ely, well known in connection with Kirkby's Inquest, had been rector of Brayton whilst archdeacon of York. He seems to have procured John de Oseville, archdeacon of Ely, as his successor at Brayton. Before Oct. 18, 1290, John de Oseville, clerk, was presented by Edmund, earl of Cornwall, to the church of Frodingham (Frothingham), Stow archdeaconry, but declined institution (Sutton Reg. Inst., m. 36d); and on March 15, 1291-2, he was instituted on the pres. of the bishop of Ely, to the church of Somersham (Sumeresham) Hunts. (Ibid., m. 86). He had letters of protection on Sept. 28, 1294 (Cal. of Patent Rolls (1292-1301), p. 93).

<sup>3</sup>William of Hambleton evidently relinquished the church of Brayton with the archdeaconry of York. By Feb. 23, 1301-2, it had returned to its normal state and John of Nassington was parson (Cal. of Pat. Rolls (1301-1307), p. 25).

John de Kirkby, archdeacon of York, resigned the rectory of Brayton in 1286. His successor was John de Oseville, archdeacon of Ely, probably presented by the abbot and convent of Selby on Kirkby's suggestion. Oseville (no. 334) resigned his benefice into the pope's hands. The archb. then sequestrated the rectory, and gave the custody to the new archdeacon of York, William of Hambleton. On the provision by the pope of a new rector, the archb. (no. 334) revoked his grant of custody and sequestered the rectory anew. Apparently the question of presentation was arranged by le Romeyn while in Italy, and the way was thus paved for this temporary appropriation of the benefice. Probably the appropriation of Harswell and the chapels of Brayton to Selby was intended as the consideration to prepare for a permanent appropriation of Brayton.

Mandate from the king to the archb. (reciting how the king of France, not content with deceiving him about Gascony, was preparing to invade England, and, if possible, extirpate the English language), to come to Westminster on Nov. 13, as well as the dean and archdeacons and one proctor for the chapter and two for the clergy, to devise means to meet this danger.

Sept. 30, 23 Edw. i. (1295). Apud Wyngham. Edwardus, Dei gracia rex Anglie, etc., venerabili in Christo patri, J., eadem gracia Ebor. archiepiscopo, etc., salutem. Sicut lex justissima, provida circumspeccione sacrorum principum stabilita, hortatur et statuit ut quod omnes tangit ab omnibus approbetur; sic et innuit evidenter ut communibus periculis per remedia provisa communiter obvietur. Sane satis nostis, et jam est, ut credimus, per universa mundi climata divulgatum qualiter rex Francie de terra nostra Vasconie nos fraudulentem et cautelose decepit, eam nobis nequiter detinendo. Nunc, vero, predictis fraude et nequicia non contentus, ad expugnacionem regni nostri, classe maxima et bellatorum copiosa multitudine congregatis, cum quibus regnum nostrum et regni ejusdem incolas hostiliter jam invasit, linguam Anglicam, si concepte iniquitatis proposito detestabili potestas cor[r]espondeat, quod Deus avertat, omnino de terra delere proponit. Apud vos nuper, scilicet, iij idus Octobris (Oct. 13), anno Gracie M<sup>o</sup>CC<sup>o</sup> nonagesimo quinto, visitacionis officium exercentes, ea que correccione digna invenimus reformavimus salubriter in hunc modum. In primis siquidem firmiter inhibemus ne inhoneste persone in refectorio, quod domus silentii et refeccionis pacifice stabilitur, comedant; licet honeste persone, quarum presencia acceptabilis cernitur, requisicione illius qui presidet admittantur. Confabulaciones eciam et dissoluciones omnimodas, maxime in camera prioris et refectorio post completorium, seu postquam conventus cubuerit, fieri totaliter prohibemus. Nullum decetero vendatur corrodium absque nostra licencia speciali. Bursarius, autem, ad cuius manus tota pecunia domus deveniat, frequenter reddat compotum de receptis; maxime bis in anno coram senioribus de conventu, ut per eos status domus toti conventui postmodum innotescat. Silentium, vero, locis et horis debitis custodiatur arcius, quod infeste dissolucionis est sepius occasio non servatum. Cellarius, autem, super administracione sua horis debitis reddat compotum omni anno. Nullus canonicorum claustralium extra clausum vagetur aliququaliter absque licencia presidentis; set circa divinum obsequium, et missam Beate Virginis, inspeccionemque librorum solliciti sint intenti. Et qui sine licencia exire sunt soliti, penali adjeccione in capitulo acerbius corrigantur. Claustrum quidem et infirmaria a discursu secularium custodiantur honestius, et maxime mulierum. Item, carole singulorum semel saltem visitentur in anno, ut omnis proprietatis suspicio excludatur. Lampas una singulis noctibus ardeat in dormitorio continue, ad tollendum occasionem forsitan delinquendi. Infirmi, autem, quatenus plus vel minus indiguerint, competencius solito procurentur, quibus per servientem aliquem mansuetum et promptum, amoto illo superbo nunc deputato eisdem nisi melius se gesserit, debite ministretur. Inutilem, eciam, familiam precipimus amoveri. Qui ad custodiam elemosine preponitur, eam servet prudencius ipsamque absque diminucione qualibet pauperibus et egenis distribuat provide; nec se prebeat facilem in danda canonicis licencia, ut ubi placuerit elemosinam suam mittant. Item, districcius inhibemus ne quis de conventu munera recipiat de cetero sine presidentis licencia, que ante recepcionem muneris, ut nota proprietatis

562. April 12, 15th year (1287). Tichille. Letter from the king to the archbishop informing him that in an action of darreyn presentment at York before Nicholas de Stapelton' and Symon le Conestable, arraigned by Ingram de Mounceus against the abbot of Wyteby about the church of Berneston', which was vacant, the abbot had granted to Ingram the right to the presentation for that turn.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>For Reginald of Thornholme see Reg. Wickwane (no. 82). Wickwane had transferred him in 1279-80 to Nostell. Comparing this visitation with Wickwane's (no. 302), there seems little doubt that the convent was in a slack state, probably owing to the negligence of the prior, whose personal residence with the canons is insisted upon in both decrees. The sacrist also seems to have been an undesirable person; and John of Swaledale or persons like him are probably aimed at in Wickwane's condemnation of 'inutiles et viles persone, bona monasterii consumentes.' The prior at both visitations was presumably Geoffrey of Nafferton, whose resignation took place in July, 1289 (no. 584). See also Reg. Giffard, no. 181.

<sup>1</sup>There is a mark to this deed, referring to an entry at the top of the folio, relating to the appointment of Sir William Darains, rector of the church of Lannesburg', to a similar position in an unnamed religious house. This probably refers to his appointment as master of Swine, mentioned in Newark's Register (fo. 8), under the date, Sept. 15, 1298.

<sup>2</sup>The archb. held the prebend of Nassington in Lincoln Minster in 1284 (Le Neve's Fasti, ii, 191), while he was precentor of that church. The next incumbent noticed by Le Neve is John de Drokenesford (Droxford, near Bishop Waltham), presented in 1305. There is a letter in this register (no. 103) from Nassington as late as June 21, 1294. (See no. 1414.) Whether Romeyn continued to hold the prebend till his death (which is most unlikely), or merely was allowed to use the prebendal house on his way to and from London is not clear. Sutton's register contains no regular institutions to prebends before 1290 and none to Nassington. Romeyn presented a vicar, Geoffrey of Banbury, to Nassington, who was admitted and instituted July 19, 1284 (Sutton (Northants) Roll a<sup>o</sup>. v). The nave and aisles of the church here are about Romeyn's date. Yarwell, from which William de Jarewelle derived his name, is a chapelry in Nassington parish.

593. 3 nonas Feb. (Feb. 3), 1289-90.<sup>2</sup> Ebor. Venerabili in Christo patri ac domino suo reverendo, domino J., permissione, etc., suus humilis et devotus officialis curie Ebor. salutem cum omnimodis obediencia, reverencia, et honore. Cum ecclesiam de Lonnesburg', cujus possessioni David filius Reginaldi olim incumbibat, pro eo pronunciaverimus vacantem quod idem David per duos menses et amplius post factam puplicacionem in diocesi Ebor. constitutionum, in novissimo Lugdunensi concilio editarum, fuit in predicta ecclesia de Lonnesburg' parochiali per bone memorie dominum Walterum Giffard', Ebor. archiepiscopum vestrumque predecessorem, rector institutus, qui nec infra annum, a tempore sibi commissi regiminis numeratum, nec eciam anno sequenti, per quatuor ad minus tempora successive currencia ad celebrandum ordines consueta, se fecit ad sacerdocium promoveri, nec de excusacione seu impedimento legitimo

<sup>1</sup>If this belongs to the end of the fourth year, the archb. was in Nottinghamshire throughout almost the whole of January, 1289-90, staying at Scrooby, from which all his letters during this period are dated, except nos. 807, 808, 1088, which are dated at Southwell. No letters are dated from Laneham.

<sup>2</sup>On March 26, 1278, the proctor of David, portionist of Pontesbury in Shropshire, appeared in Clunbury church before the bishop's commissaries to show cause for plurality of benefices, David having accepted the church of Londesborough, dioc. York. No cause was shown, and the case was postponed till April 11. A similar postponement was granted to Walter [son of Reginald] (Reg. Cantilupe, pp. 159, 160). David de Pauntesber' was admitted to the church of Londesborough May 1, 1275, on the presentation of Sir Reginald son of Peter (Reg. Giffard, p. 288). July 2, 1278, David appeared before the bishop at Bishop's Castle, and undertook to produce evidence that he merely held the custody of Londesborough without cure of souls (Reg. Cantilupe, p. 180). Aug. 18, 1300. Institution of William de Monkton to the portion vacated by David son of Reginald, on the presentation of John son of Reginald (Reg. Swinfield, p. 532). These facts are taken from Shropshire Chantry Certificates (p. 189), edited by Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson. Thus it seems that David of Pontesbury was the same person as David son of Reginald, who, although not ordained priest, kept possession of Londesborough for nearly 15 years.

fidem fecit aliququaliter coram me ; ac ob hoc eundem David ab ipsa ecclesia, quatenus de facto incubuit, eidem sententialiter amoveri, justicia exigente, insuperque decreverimus Willelmum de Arrains, clericum, ad ipsam ecclesiam de Loñnesburg' canonice presentatum, ad predictam ecclesiam per vos admitti debere et rectorem institui in eadem ; vestre paternitati supplico reverende quatinus quod vestrum est, si placet, exequamini ulterius in hac parte. Conservet vos populo et ecclesie sue Deus per tempora longiora.

2 idus Feb. (Feb. 12, 1289-90). Cawode. Custody of the sequestration in the church of Lonnesburg' till the next ordination, granted to William, son of Arnald Darains, clk., presented by Sir John son of Reginald, knt.

<sup>1</sup>These were the proctors of the abbey of Citeaux (cf. no. 590 ; Reg. Giffard, no. 180 ; Reg. Wickwane, no. 745), resident, or occasionally resident, at Scarborough. The phrase, however, is curious in view of the slender tradition which caused Scarborough "priors" to be reckoned among alien houses in Dugdale, and magnified it into an abbey in Hinderwell's History of Scarborough.

<sup>3</sup>In Giffard's Register (p. 289), the institution of Richard de Binington to the church of Willerby is recorded in 1275. The original is very badly written, but the word seems rather Binington than Boington, though the latter is undoubtedly the reading here, and is the correct form.

647. 12 kal. Marcii (Feb. 18, 1292-3). Wylton.' Citacio contra executores magistri R. de Scard', olim decani Ebor., ad ostendendum si quid pro se habuerint quare, ob ipsorum defectum, administracionem bonorum dicti defuncti et execucionem ultime voluntatis ejusdem archiepiscopus habere non debeat. Decano de Herthille. Dudum venientes ad nos Willelmus de Eboraco, clericus, dominus Robertus Uchthred', miles, et Johannes, frater ejus, quoddam scriptum, sigillo bone memorie domini Roberti (Burnell), quondam Bathoniensis episcopi, ut prima facie apparuit, exhibuerunt, ipsumque esse testamentum magistri Roberti de Scardeburg', quondam decani Ebor., asserentes, ac petentes ut super ipsius probacione reciperemus testes, et predictis domino Roberto et Johanni, ac aliis executoribus, ut dicebant, in eodem nominatis, administracionem committeremus. Et licet, inspectis probacionibus super hoc exhibitis, de ipso testamento et ejus confeccione non potuit haberi aliququaliter plena fides, nos, tamen, cum ipsis graciose volentes agere et potissime occasione dicti domini episcopi, executoris in ipsa scriptura principaliter nominati, domino Willelmo de Swyna, rectori ecclesie Sancte Marie Bishop (sic) de Eboraco, ac prefatis domino Roberto et J., administracionem bonorum dicti defuncti, prout eadem scriptura continebat, sub certa forma commisimus, tali, videlicet, quod sine prefato domino Bathoniensi episcopo nullatenus ministrarent, et juramento interposito quod tam debita quam legata solverent, et fideliter se in singulis gererent, rationemque redderent, cum essent super hoc requisiti. Verum iidem R. et J., ad quorum manus bona pervenerint defuncti, in execucione tepidi existentes et remissi, es alienum, legata diversis personis privatis, et alia in pios usus relicta solvere, in grave periculum anime ipsius defuncti, quamquam bona ad hoc sufficerent, hucusque pertinaciter omiserunt, ipsa in proprios usus convertendo, necnon dampnabiliter consumendo; quod in civitate Ebor. et locis adjacentibus adeo puplicum et notorium existit quod nulla poterit tergiversacione celari. Racionem eciam super administracione bonorum, si quam fecerint, reddere, licet super hiis sepius essent moniti et humiliter requisiti, contemptibiliter recusarunt. Et quia ad nos pertinet juxta legitimas et canonicas sancciones dilatas defunctorum voluntates studiosius adimplere, tibi mandamus quatinus prefatos W., R., et J. cites peremptorie ex causa quod compareant coram nobis vel officiali nostro in nostra Ebor. ecclesia die Veneris proxima post festum beati Petri in cathedra, causam rationabilem, si quam habent, quare propter ipsorum defectum administracionem bonorum dicti defuncti et execucionem sue ultime voluntatis, que pretenditur ad nos fore devolutam, declarare, ac ipsos omni emolumento, quod eos ratione dicte voluntatis contingit, seu contingere poterit, juxta juris exigenciam, privare minime debeamus, proposituri, ac eciam, ut convenit, probaturi testamentumque ipsum cum inventario delaturi; denunciands eisdem quod, si non venerint, aut canonicum non proposuerint, seu propositum sufficienter non probaverint, dictam administracionem propter ipsorum negligenciam manifestam ad nos esse devolutam ipsosque perjuros intendimus declarare; necnon ad restitutionem omnium que ad eos occasione voluntatis ipsius defuncti quomodolibet pervenerunt per omnem censuram ecclesie compellere justicia suadente. Qualiter autem mandatum nostrum fueris executus, nos seu officialem nostrum dictis die et loco certifies per tuas patentes litteras, harum seriem continentes.

Mandate to the prioress of Swine to send lady Helewys Darains, one of her nuns, to Wykeham Priory.

<sup>1</sup>One is tempted to think that this mandate, couched in such stringent terms, may have been to some extent inspired by the archb.'s old enmity against Robert of Scarborough, and that, now that the powerful bishop of Bath and Wells was dead, he may have wished to coerce the executors into surrendering a trust, whose details they may have guarded from him too jealously.

<sup>1</sup>There is another copy of this document on fo. 165, an interpolation. The differences are noted below. This appropriation to Selby, as the result of a transference of the impropriation from Sulby Abbey in Northants., is not noticed by Lawton, or apparently by Torre or archb. Sharp; and in pope Nicholas' taxation the church is taxed at 3*li* 6*s* 8*d*, with the note, probably in this case contemporary 'Domini Willelmi de Hamelton.' In this same year (1293, no. 340) the church of Brayton, in the patronage of Selby Abbey, was appropriated temporarily to Sir William de Hameldon', then archdeacon of York. It looks therefore as if the archb. had arranged this appropriation in compensation for the temporary loss of the patronage of Brayton by Selby Abbey, and perhaps with a view to the ultimate annexation of Brayton to the archdeaconry. The Premonstratensian house of Sulby, which surrendered the impropriation, was founded early in the twelfth century by William de Wyville. Sulby is now a separate civil parish, about six to eight miles S.W. of Market Harborough, but it is properly in the parish of Sibbertoft. The site of the abbey, however, is much nearer the village of Welford ; and this accounts for the title given to it in archb. Geoffrey's charter. There is no evidence of any prior foundation of the house at Welford itself. There are some very scanty remains of the abbey, which lies on the western limit of the battle-field of Naseby. The condition of Harswell church at the time of pope Nicholas's taxation suggests that the appropriation was nominal, and possibly, as being distant and of small value, had been farmed out to William de Hameldon. The advowson was in the possession of the Salvin family in the fifteenth century and passed from them to the Gascoignes

(Yorkshire Deeds (Yorkshire Record Series), p. 83, and Lawton's Collections, p. 341). At the time of the Valor Ecclesiasticus Harswell was a very poor rectory ; and it is not likely that either Sulby or Selby got much profit out of it.

<sup>2</sup>There were three churches in the East Riding belonging to Kirkham, dedicated to the Virgin, Birdsall, Sledmere, and Westow. St. Mary de Mora is either Westow or Sledmere. A church which must be one of these appears under this name in the Taxatio Papæ Nicholai, and Lawton (p. 280) assigns the taxation there given to Sledmere. In Ducarel's Repertory (Lawton, p. 604), it is identified with Westow, and this document referred to. It cannot at any rate be Birdsall, which is mentioned in the Tax. P. N. Most likely the place intended is Westow; for Sledmere was at this time probably not regarded as a separate benefice. Sledmere is not mentioned in Valor Ecclesiasticus, while Westow appears, though at only half the value mentioned as that of 'Sancte Marie de Mora' in 1291. In Bacon's Thesaurus (1786), Sledmere is marked doubtfully 'Vic. or Cur.' Moreover, 'Sledemer' was a known name at this time, and in Reg. Wickwane, no. 746, the 'cimiterium de Sledemer' is mentioned. The difference between the value of St. Mary of the Moor in 1291 and Westow in 1535-6 is of course due to the fact that the first was an appropriated rectory, while the second was a vicarage which had been ordained in the interim.

At the same time, in no. 762, the position of Blyth as a 'subdita domus' to the house at Rouen is clearly defined. The larger alien houses received letters of denization under Henry v. <sup>2</sup>In the Lincoln institution books Abburbury is a form which occurs for this place as late, at any rate, as the time of Repyngdon (1405-19). Adderbury belonged to the bishops of Winchester (manor and advowson): both were given to New College, Oxford, by William of Wykeham, soon after the foundation of that college. The place is called Edburberi in pope Nicholas's Taxation; Abberbury in Pat. 13 Edw. ii., and Eadderbury in Wykeham's Register. Thomas at this time held the prebend of Wetwang, in York, to which he had been collated in 1282 on resigning Osbaldwick (Reg. Wickwane, no. 33). He refused the arch-deaconry of Cleveland in 1289 (no. 1077 inf.). Walter Langton gave him preferment in Lichfield: he was collated to the prebend of Whittington and Berkswich, Feb. 14, 1298-9

(Le Neve, i, 638), which he apparently resigned for the precentorship. He was collated to the latter, Sept. 1, 1303, and died 1307 (Ibid., i, 579). Raymond de Got, nephew of Clement v, succeeded him both in Wetwang and the precentorship of Lichfield. Le Neve (i, 636) notes Thomas de Adbury or Adderbury as holding the prebend of Wellington in Lichfield, and dying in 1298: probably he was collated to Wellington by Langton in 1296, and resigned it for Whittington in 1298-9. May 6, 1305. use of the queen of Castile (Ibid., p. 97). Richard, Stephen's ward, married, while under age, Isabel, widow of Philip Burnel (brother of the chancellor?). They obtained royal pardon at the instance of the bishop of Lincoln, and were granted custody of their lands during Richard's minority (Ibid. (1281-1292), p. 111). It is probable that the bishop and Stephen were uncles of Richard de Sutton. Stephen was collated by the bishop in 1280 to the archdeaconry of Northampton. He died in 1290, holding the archdeaconry (Le Neve, ii, 56), and the prebends of Empingham in Lincoln (Ibid., 146), and [South] Newbald in York (Ibid., iii, 204). See no. 1114 below. He was succeeded as archdeacon of Northampton by a brother, Thomas Sutton (Ibid., ii, 56), instituted Jan. 9, 1290-1 (Reg. Sutton, Inst. fo. 145), who in 1292 exchanged the prebend of Leighton Bosard for that of Thame in Lincoln (Ibid., 170); instituted Sept. 11, 1292 (Reg. Sutton, Inst. fo. 146d).

In 1268 Sir Robert presented Stephen to Averham (Reg. Giffard, no. 316); the presentation was disputed, and Stephen resigned (Ibid., no. 334). In 1272 he was presented by Sir Robert to Warsop (Ibid., 266), on the death of William of Lexington, dean of Lincoln (Le Neve, ii, 31), and previous rector of Warsop (Reg. Giffard, no. 318). On July 24, 1284, bishop Sutton instituted Oliver Sutton, a minor, probably a younger son of Sir Robert, to the church of Aston (Aston-le-Walls, Northants.), on the presentation of Sir Stephen Sutton, canon of York, as guardian of Richard: the church was void by the resignation of Stephen (Inst. Sutton, Northampton roll, m. 6). It is rather odd that Stephen should not there be mentioned as archdeacon of Northampton.

<sup>1</sup>Cotham, Newark deanery, seems at a later date to have been appropriated to Thurgarton. It is not clear what prebend Robert of Sleaford (as I believe this name to be) held at this time. He had been collated to Rampton June 13, 1281 (Reg. Wickwane, no. 38) but resigned it as Cincius de Pyna had been provided by the pope (Ibid. no. 40). On Oct. 7, 1282, he was collated to a canonry in Beverley (Ibid. no. 49A). He resigned his stall at Beverley to accept the prebend of Normanton in Southwell, Dec. 29, 1286 (nos. 1032, 1033 infra). July 6, 1289, he was collated to Osbaldwick in York (Ibid., no. 1077). A dispensation dated June 26, 1289, was granted to Robert for illegitimacy, to be ordained and hold a benefice beside his canonry and prebend of Southwell (Cal. P. L., i, 498); and is followed (Cal. P. L., i, 504), on Oct. 1, 1289, by an explanation, defining his illegitimacy as son of a clerk in minor orders, and requiring him to be ordained and reside in his benefice. He was not chancellor of York, as suggested in the index to Reg. Wickwane, but of the archb.'s household (Reg. Wickwane, no. 783). See also a further dispensation of June 24, 1289 (Cal. P. L., i, 511). Aug. 14, 1284. Robert de la Forde, canon of Beverley, obtained protection for three years as going abroad with archb. Garciones autem canonicorum, ab exterioribus laboribus redeuncium, ab infirmaria omnino excludimus, ita quod ibi non comedant, set juxta suam condicionem in aula communi vel alibi procurentur. Item, celarium, quod propriis conventus usibus deputatur, a strepitu secularium personarum custodiatur districcius, ita quod potacionibus non vacent inibi, quod dissolucionis ingluviem nonnunquam noscitur ampliare ; nec inhoneste persone in refectorio, quod domus silentii et refeccionis pacifice stabilitur, aliquando comedant, licet honeste persone, quarum presencia acceptabilis cernitur, requisicione illius qui presidet admittantur. in Dei nomine duximus corrigenda. In primis, itaque, in virtute sancte obediencie precipimus injungendo quod decreta venerabilium patrum, predecessorum nostrorum, que penes vos resident, et injuncta quedam, presertim que in littera cujusdam abbatis vestri ordinatione provida inseruntur, apud omnes vestrum et singulos districcius de cetero observentur; et littera ejusdem abbatis, quam approbamus merito contentorum in ipsa, saltem semel in mense coram vobis in capitulo, silentibus preter lectorem omnibus, recitetur. Et, licet observando premissa omnia que regule vestre conveniunt foveatis, specialiter, tamen, adiciendo precipimus quod conventus, et singuli de conventu, priori tanquam capiti preposito reverenter obediant et absque indignacione, murmuracione, et reluctacione quibuslibet pareant ut tenentur, quod sub pena animadversionis condigne omnibus et singulis injungimus observandum. Prior, eciam, conventum suum juxta regulares tradiciones attenta circumspeccione pertractet, ita quod membra capiti et capud membris cor[r]esponsione debita uniantur. Prior, insuper, fidele inventarium de bonis monasterii singulis annis faciat, et de hiis compotum bis reddat in anno, vel semel ad minus, presentibus saltem quatuor de senioribus de conventu. Illud, autem, religioni dissonum quod in camera, que misericordia nuncupatur, ubi omnes de conventu communiter, spreto debito refeccionis loco, propter esum carniarum continuari hactenus consuevit, penitus reprobamus; statuantes quod, duabus partibus de conventu in refectorio prandentibus, tertia pars per girum camere seu misericordie predicto fruatur solacio pro disposicione provida presidentis. Injunctas, autem, penitencias quibusdam fratribus de conventu pro delictis personalibus precipimus humiliter perfici et contrite, ut, dum sacramentum penitencie contractas sordes abluit, salus se ingerat et luceat nitidius animarum. Denique in observacione omnium et singulorum injunctorum nostrorum premissorum ita vos reddatis devotos quod vestre religiositatis augeatur talentum. In quorum nostre sollicitudinis officium pie mereri valeat coram Christo. Contra inobedientes siquidem et rebelles in visitacione nostra proxima juxta singulorum demerita, quantum cum Deo poterimus, acius procedemus. Bene valete.

<sup>1</sup>Quinzaine of Trinity (1290). Will. de Wyvill v. Andrew de Nevill, about the advowson of Barneby juxta Newerke. The plaintiff pleaded that Eustachia 'antecessor sua,' was seized of the advowson temp. Henry iii, and presented her clerk, Thomas de Boulton, to the church, who was admitted and instituted. From Eustachia the right descended to Thomas, her son and heir, and from him, who died without issue, to the claimant William, as his brother and heir. In the quinzaine of Trinity (1292), four knights, Robert de Meringe, Robert de Cumpton, John Huse of Flynteheam, and John de Vylyers of Kinaunton, chose the following jury, John de Heriz, Walt. de Loudeham, Ric. de Byng-ham, Walt. de Gousil, John de

<sup>2</sup>The dean of Lincoln's parsonages in Notts. were Mansfield with its chapels (Skegby, Mansfield Woodhouse), and South Leverton with Cottam chapel. Skegby however was regarded as a free chapel in 1399. Ratification of the estate of John Hertipole, parson of Weston-in-the-Clay and warden of the free chapel of Skegby (Cal. P. R. (1399-1401), p. 4). For the claim of the dean of Lincoln to be ordinary of these churches see Reg. Newark, fo. 14. Philip de Wylughby had held many important offices, appointed escheator north of the Trent, Sept. 22, 1274 (Cal. P. R. 1272-81, p. 57), had the custody of Fountains abbey, then in debt to the king by reason of a loan in the king's Jewry, etc., committed to him, Oct. 11, 1274 (Ibid., p. 59); occurs as a baron of the Exchequer, June 25, 1278 (Ibid., p. 272); appointed chancellor of the Exchequer, April 11, 1283 (Ibid., (1282-1291), p. 60); which office he held till 1305 (Ibid. (1301-1307), p. 378). He was collated to the prebend of Bilton at York in 1298 (Reg. Newark, fo. 3) and had in succession the prebends of Thorpe and Sharow at Ripon (Memorials of Ripon, ii, 210, 235). On Nov. 2, 1275, he was presented by the king to the church of Easington in Holderness (Cal. P. R. (1272-1281), p. 108). There are many other references to him on the Patent Rolls. Aug. 24, 1301. Phil. of Willoughby, dean of Lincoln and chancellor of the Exchequer, was granted a licence, "by reason of his service with the king in the Holy Land and elsewhere, and in the exchequer," to reside in the church of Lincoln, and return to the exchequer at will; this, however, was not to excuse his serving in the exchequer as often as the king should send for him (Ibid. (1301-7), p. 615). The episcopal confirmation of Philip of Willoughby's election as dean of Lincoln, with mandate to install, bears date at Liddington, June 20, 1288. Philip exhibited a dispensation from Honorius iv (in full on dorset of roll), dated Tivoli, July 11, 1287, permitting him to hold another benefice, even a parsonage or dignity with cure of souls annexed, in addition to the church of Clive (Cliffe-at-Hoo), dioc. Rochester. Philip undertook to give up the churches of Willoughby (Wylgby) and [blank in original, which he had obtained 'sub nomine custodie'] (Sutton, Linc. roll, a<sup>o</sup> ix). He resigned Willoughby, his successor, Hugh of Willoughby, chaplain, being presented by Sir Will. of Willoughby, knight, and inst. Sept. 10, 1290 (Sutton, Reg. Inst. fo. 1d). Willoughby is in the archdeaconry of Lincoln, near Alford.

Walesby.

<sup>1</sup>Some of Clarell's benefices have been enumerated in a note to Reg. Giffard, no. 133. He was rector of Overton (Overton Quatremars, Leicestershire) by Jan. 1250-1, when he was a clerk in the service of John Mansel, provost of Beverley (Cal. P. L., i., 265). He must then have obtained the church of Hemingford Abbots, near St. Ives (Ibid., p. 311). He was now a person of trust in the king's service, for on May 4, 1255, he was appointed one of the guardians of the see of York, then void by the death of archb. Gray (Pat. Roll 39 H. 3, pt. 2, m. 9). On Aug. 5, 1255, the king collated him to the vacant prebend of Norwell (Overhall, Le Neve, iii., 437) in Southwell (Pat. u. s. m. 5). The collation was cancelled, as the king's right was disputed, but Clarell was apparently collated in the end. In Feb., 1258-9, he was rector of Overton, Hemingford, and prebendary of Norwell; and in addition was rector of [East] Bridgeford and Elton, in Bingham deanery, Babworth, in Retford deanery, and 'Houton'—this last may be Hooton Roberts, for Reg. Giffard (no. 133) contains a presentation of Clarell, made in Sept. 1272. Clarell afterwards acquired the presentation to Hooton Roberts (Reg. Wickwane, no. 105). He was rector of Cantley, near Doncaster, by 1272, and was still in possession of the benefice in 1289 (Reg. Giffard, no. 136 and no. 236 supra). Meanwhile, he had acquired more Nottinghamshire churches. On June 13, 1286, he is mentioned as rector of Harworth and [East] Markham, in Retford deanery [he was also rector of West Markham (now called Markham Clinton) (nos. 809, 925)], and Lowd-

ham, in Nottingham deanery, as well as of "certain chapels which the dean and chapter of Rouen held to their uses": he had been engaged in litigation about the fruits of his benefices, and, on losing, had appealed to the pope. He was summoned in person or by proctor to Rome by Honorius iv, on this account and on that of a second suit touching East Bridgeford (Cal. P. L. i., 488-9). On Oct. 31, 1290, he was instituted in the person of Master Benedict of Halam, his proctor, to the church of Stanford-on-Avon, Northants, then void by the resignation of William of Hambleton. The patrons were then Selby abbey [which had licence to appropriate the church a little later] (Sutton, Inst. roll, Northampton, m. 11). On Jan. 28, 1291-2, he was thought to be dead, and the king granted the free chapel of Tickhill, of which he was incumbent, to Boniface of Saluzzo (Cal. P. R. (1281-1292), p. 470). The mistake was discovered, and the order vacated. On Oct. 18, 1294, he was granted letters of protection. These, in addition to his canonry at Southwell, the chapelry at Tickhill, and the churches of Harworth, Babworth, Eastmarkham, Walesby, Hooton Roberts, E. Bridgeford, Lowdham, Hemingford, and Stanford, mention among his benefices the churches of Norwell (which possibly went with his third of the prebend), Penistone, [North] Wheatley (Retford deanery), Edingley (peculiar of Southwell), and Owston (Lincolnshire, I. of Axholme) (Cal. P. R. (1292-1301), p. 120). This shows that Le Neve's statement (iii., 437) that he died in 1293 is wrong. He was dead by injunctions of this kind the archb. seems to have endeavoured to get a fuller recognition of the independence of Blyth, and its subordination to his jurisdiction as ordinary. The monks appear to have been almost entirely foreigners.

<sup>1</sup>Cf. no. 797. Of interest with a view to the actual connexion between the abbey at Rouen and Blyth (no. 730). These documents seem to bear out the view that Blyth was a daughter house of the abbey on Mont - Ste - Cathérine rather than a mere alien cell. By

Meminimus nos alias vobis scripsisse quod fratrem Robertum de Angerville, monachum vestrum, quem propter intollerabilitatem suam ad vestrum monasterium remisimus, reciperetis et juxta disciplinam regularem ad salutem sue anime tractaretis; set vos eundem apud Blidam, ubi prius male se habuit, minus provide remisistis. 3 kal. Marcii (Feb. 27, 1290-1). Scroby. Abbati monasterii sancte Katerine juxta Rothomagum, salutem cum benedictione et gracia Salvatoris. Sollicitudinem nostri officii ad hoc cernimus convertendam quod religiose contemplacioni deditis in tranquillitate conversacionis sedulo prospiciamus intuitu, fratres infestos, jurgiis et discordiarum materiis insistentes, a religiosorum nostrorum ortulo evellendo. Cum, itaque, rep[er]erieremus fratrem J. de Bellevill',<sup>2</sup> monachum vestrum de Blida, quem ad monasterium vestrum ob certas causas remisimus, adeo intollerabilem existere quod monachis ibidem Deo famulantibus non modicum afficit mora ejus, ipsum ad vos vestramque abbathiam, a qua missus fuerat, remittimus iterato; providenciam vestram in Domino exhortantes quatinus eum in caritatis visceribus admittatis,

To the same sending back another monk whose conduct was unbearable, and requesting that only well behaved monks should be sent to Blyth.

Cum itaque pium fuerit et pietati congruum pro illis personis intercedere, quas bene meritas attendimus et devotas, discrecionem vestram amantissimam intime requirimus exhortando quatinus prefatum N., cujus sollicitos labores quos circa utilitatem domus de Blida hucusque vigilanter inpendit visceraliter commendamus, ad vos in prefate domus dispendium nullatenus revocetis; maxime cum, ipso amoto, non inveniretur aliquis de domo substituentus utilis in officii loco sui; ipsius moram, quem adhuc recedere tanquam bene meritum nolumus, nec id vultis ad deterioracionem domus, ut credimus, habentes penitus excusatam.

Numerous other places of the name in other parts of Normandy. Belleville (nos. 797, 842) is a little way N. of Dieppe, close to the sea. Nicholas de Bretteville, a monk of Blyth, was appointed prior and instituted on Nov. 1, 1303, on the cession of William Burdon, instituted in 1273, a member of an old Nottinghamshire family seated at Maplebeck and Boughton (Raine's History of the Parish of Blyth, p. 50).

<sup>2</sup>This presentation is rather perplexing. In 1275-6 and 1282 the prior and convent of Durham had presented (Reg. Giffard, no. 810; Reg. Wickwane, no. 274). The prior and convent of Norton, a house of Augustinian Canons, near Run-corn, recovered the presentation to Ratcliffe-on-Soar in 1270 (Reg. Giffard, nos. 222, 224, 227, 242, 244). Had Durham granted them the presentation for this turn? The advowson appears to have belonged to Durham after this period, while the church of Ratcliffe became an impropriation of Thurgarton. See no. 862 for the next presentation to Ratcliffe by Norton priory. See also no. 944.

<sup>3</sup>The rector, Master Will. de la Marche, was granted custody of the sequestration of the church, Feb. 3, 1283-4 (Reg. Wickwane, no. 283). This was the well-known king's clerk, treasurer of England, 1290-5, consecrated bp. of Bath and Wells in succession to Burnell, May 17, 1293. He died June 11, 1302; it is usually supposed that the fabric of the chapter-house at Wells, with the exception of the vault, was built during his time. In March, 1290-1, he held the churches of Mamcestre, either Manchester or Mancetter, Warwickshire dioc. Cov. and Lichfield; Washington (Vessington), dioc. Durham; Brading (Brerdigge) and Freshwater, dioc. Winton; Stonegrave, Marnham, and Leven (Levenen), dioc. York; and Thorpe-le-Fallows (in glebis), dioc. Linc. William de Ros of Ilkesdon, and Eustachia, his wife, about the advowson of Seleston. Plaintiff alleged that his father Alexander presented John le Vavasour, temp. Henry iii. The defendant replied that the presentation had been made by Hugh son of Ralph, in right of Agnes, his wife, Eustachia's grandmother. The jury on the octave of Michaelmas found in favour of the defendants. It seems that, on Vavasour's resignation, Alexander de Wandesle, who had married a daughter of Robert le Vavasour, then sheriff of Notts. John le Vavasour was instituted on letters of presentation from Alexander de Wandesle. No inquisition was taken on this second presentation, nor was Vavasour ever out of possession of the church (Assize Rolls (Notts.), No. 671, m. 10). See also Coram Rege. <sup>1</sup>Edw. de S. Johanne, son of Sir John de S. Johanne, seneschal of Guienne about this time, was collated to South Scarle prebend on Sept. 23, 1294 (Reg. Sutton, Inst. fo. 148). He already had accepted the offer of Decem Librarum, which was cancelled by this. He waived a collation or provision to Gretton in 1298 in favour of Boniface of Saluzzo (Ibid., i. 151 [152]). On April 29, 1301, he was provided to Leighton Buzzard prebend (Le Neve's Fasti, ii., 170), which he exchanged for Cropledy with Gilbert of Middleton in 1314. He exchanged Cropledy for a stall at Exeter with John of Sandal in the same year (Ibid., ii., 140). Possibly these St. Johns (St. Jean de Maurienne) were a branch of the house of Savoy. See note on no. 1106. Boniface of Aosta (no. 1052) may have belonged to the same house. Aosta was the birth-place of Thomas, count of Maurienne, brother of Amadeus v, count of Savoy.

Appointment of Master Will. of Pickering, archdeacon of Nottingham, as the archb.'s proctor in a case against Sir Boniface of Saluzzo, claiming certain churches as belonging to the chapelry of Tickhill.

<sup>1</sup>This business arises from Clarell's death : see nos. 936-8, and no. 783*n*, where the grant of the free chapel of Tickhill to Boniface of Saluzzo is noted. Boniface was collated May 31, 1295, to a third portion of Masham preb. in York (no. 1170). Boniface and George were two sons of Thomas, marquess of Saluzzo, and began their career of clerical preferment in England early. In Jan., 1296-7, Boniface was in his twentieth year, and not ordained : he was a papal chaplain, rector of Almondbury and Campsall, and held the royal chapel of Tickhill. On Jan. 28, Boniface viii provided him to a canonry of Lincoln, with reservation of a prebend (Cal. P.L., i., 568). Soon after this he resigned the church of Penistone, having been presented by a layman, and finding that he had no right to hold it without a dispensation : Boniface viii, on March 2, 1296-7, provided him to the rectory, with a dispensation to hold the other benefices, at the request of Francis, cardinal of St. Mary in Cosmedin (Ibid., i., 569). A further dispensation of April 23, 1297, allowed him a respite of three years before his ordination as deacon or priest, but stipulates for the supply of vicars to the churches (Ibid., i., 571). In 1298 he was provided, as by reservation, to the prebend of Gretton in Lincoln (Le Neve's Fasti, ii., 151). He still held the prebend in July, 1316, when he presented Hugh of Berkhamstead to the vicarage of Gretton (Dalderby, Inst., fo. 129). With it he held the archdeaconry of Buckingham, to which he was admitted March 10, 1298-9 (Reg. Sutton Inst. fo. 153). On May 23, 1309, Clement v granted him an indult to visit his archdeaconry by deputy for three years (Cal. P. L., ii., 55). In 1319 (Le Neve's Fasti, u.s.) he exchanged his archdeaconry for the precentorship of Salisbury with his brother (Le Neve says cousin) George, and was admitted June 28, 1319 (Le Neve's Fasti, ii., 641). The chapter of Salisbury in 1322 refused him his daily dividend as canon and prebendary, and John xxii ordered bp. Mortival to see that he received justice (Cal. P. L., ii., 221). He was dead by Oct. 26, 1323, when Nicholas de la Wyle was provided to the precentorship of Salisbury (Ibid., ii., 235). George of Saluzzo had many preferments, but not much in the north of England. In 1333 the estate of Master George de Saluciis, the king's kinsman, was ratified as archdeacon of Buckingham in the church of Lincoln, and as prebendary of Masham in that of York (Cal. Pat. Rolls (1330-4), p. 407). He also held the living of Womersley (Ibid. (1307-13), p. 392). A nephew, James, son of John of Saluzzo, held English benefices including one in the gift of St. Mary's, York (Cal. P. L., ii., 56).

UNDECIMO.

957. 4 idus Feb. (Feb. 10), 1295-6. Thorpe. Institution and induction of William of York, subdeacon, to the church of Hedon', on the pres. of the king, "ratione terrarum domini Johannis de Hedon', defuncti, qui de honore de Tichille tenuit in capite, in manu ipsius regis existencium." Headon.

958. 12 kal. Marcii (Feb. 19), 1295-6. Brampton'. Institution of Robert de Burton', deacon, to the vicarage of the church of Blida, on the pres. of the prior and convent of the same. Blyth.

959. 7 kal. Marcii (Feb. 24), 1295-6. York. Institution of Nicholas de Burton', subdeacon, to the church of Egmonton', on the pres. of the prior and convent of Newstead (de Novo loco) in Schirewod'. Egmonton.

960. 5 kal. Marcii (Feb. 26), 1295-6. Burton'. Institution and induction of Sewall de Weston', canon of Wirkesop, priest, to the vicarage of the church of Wyshowe (Wyssowe in the margin), on the pres. of the prior and convent of Wirkesop'. Wysall.

961. 3 kal. Marcii (Feb. 28), 1295-6. Burton'. The same of Master Henry de Mamesfeld',<sup>1</sup> subdeacon, to the church of Flintham, on the pres. of the abbot and convent of Wellebeck'. Flintham.

962.<sup>2</sup> 5 nonas Marcii (March 3, 1295-6). Burton'. Contra ministros Bonifacii de Saluciis, cui per regem confer-tur capellania de Tichille, jurisdictionem archiepiscopie in nonnullis usurpantes. Archidiacono Notinghamie. Quod dominus B. de Saluciis et sui ministri jurisdictionem nostram communem in multis ecclesiis archidiaconatus vestri usurpent perniciosissimum est exemplo, ac nobismet ipsis per tacitam negligenciam evidens paramus periculum et nostre ecclesie perpetuum prejudicium, nisi tam manifesto To the arch-deacon of Nottingham, to warn parishioners of parishes claimed by Boniface of Saluzzo as belonging to the chapelry of Tickhill, not to obey him.

them, as he was parson of Lowdham, Wheatley, Harworth, and West Markham (Cal. Pat. Rolls (1307-13), p. 526), but not without a struggle, as archb. Newark treated him and his vicars as intruders in 1298-9 (Reg. Newark, no. 129). The churches there concerned are Harworth, the two Markhams, Lowdham, Walesby, East Bridgford, and Wheatley.

facinori saltem aliqualliter resistamus. Cernimus, igitur, expedire quod per moniciones solemnes omnibus vicariis, presbiteris ceterisque parochianis ecclesiarum ipsarum faciatis publice inhiberi, ne in visitacionibus, capitulis, seu alias in spiritualibus citacionibus prefati Bonifacii vel ministrorum suorum pareant vel mandatis; denunciantes eorum sentencias, si quas forsan erronee tulerint contra ipsos, fore irritas atque nullas. Hec negligencie minime committantur. Si autem vobis visum fuerit expedire quod contra presumptores hujusmodi per censuram ecclesie acrius procedatur, vestrum super hoc nobis consilium et modum procedendi per latorem presencium rescribatis; nichilominus expressa superius cum celeritate debita efficaciter exequentes.

A similar letter to the abbot of Jervaulx.

<sup>1</sup>Cf. no. 420. Croxton abbey of Premonstratensian Canons is the Leicestershire house (Croxton Kyriel or Kerrial), often confused with the Cistercian house of Croxden in Staffordshire. The advowson of the church of Melling, archdeaconry of Richmond, which the archb. had held, was the property of Croxton abbey (Reg. Wickwane, no. 611). The abbot and convent had licence to appropriate, May 20, 1310 (Cal. Pat. Rolls (1307-13), p. 229). The archb. seems to have visited the abbey at least twice, on June 21, 1287 (no. 165), and on July 6 and 7, 1295 (nos. 420, 1173). It lay a little to the east of the direct road (now a drift-road) between Newark and Stamford, which avoids Grantham; and, between the archb.'s two visits, it is just possible that Edward i. brought Queen Eleanor's body here, among the monasteries visited on his roundabout road from Lincoln to London. The point nearest to Croxton on the old road is still known as "Three Queens," and Mr. W. Stevenson of Alfreton and T. M. Blagg of Newark, who know the topography of that part very well, both think that this name may have arisen from the erection of an "Eleanor Cross," like that at Geddington, there.

Gruyères. The lords of Vuippens were already numbered amongst the most considerable in the country. Ulrich married (1) Itta de Neuchatel, (2) Agnes de Grandson. His son Peter died in 1290, in Cyprus, whilst on a crusade. Besides his son and heir, William, who was bailiff of Vaud in 1276 and 1281, he had a younger son, Gerard, who by the favour of Peter of Savoy, earl of Richmond, became archdeacon of Richmond in 1290. He was bishop of Lausanne, 1301-1309, and of Bâle, 1309-1325. See Dictionnaire Géographique de la

He was summoned to Parliament in 1299 and 1305. He died at Lausanne, April 2, 1328, where he was buried.

Prebendam<sup>3</sup>, igitur, nostre Eboracensis ecclesie, que fuit domini J. de Kirkeby in ipsa, per consecrationem ejusdem in episcopum Elyensem vacantem, tibi, de cujus virtutibus fiduciam sinceram optinemus, cum suis juribus et pertinenciis universis conferimus et assignamus intuitu caritatis, has nostras patentes litteras tibi tradentes in testimonium premissorum.

Collation of Master
Thomas of Wakefeld
to a prebend
at York.

<sup>1</sup>The hay or inclosure at Langwith (Wheldrake parish) seems generally to have been let by the dean and chapter to the archbishop. It was leased to archb. Wickwane for life (Reg. Wickwane, p. 257). See also Yorkshire Inquisitions, iii, 38, 104.

<sup>2</sup>John of Kirkby was consecrated bishop of Ely by archbishop Peckham at Canterbury, Sept. 22, 1286, (Le Neve's Fasti, i, 330), the day before this appointment. He was treasurer of England from 1284 to 1290, and has given his name to Kirkby's Inquest. Le Neve (i, 568) mentions him as archdeacon of Coventry as early as 1272. Mr. R. J. Dent's Gedney court rolls show that he was rector of Gedney in Lincolnshire in 1275, having been instituted Oct. 15, 1266 (Gravesend, Lincoln Roll, m.11). His prebend at York was granted at the king's request (Reg. Wickwane, no. 626). He owned property in Northants, including Little Oakley manor and advowson, near Kettering.

<sup>3</sup>According to Le Neve (Fasti, iii, 176), this prebend may have been Buttevant. The collation (Nov. 11, 1279) of Sir John de Kirkeby, shows that it was then called after its money value (Reg. Wickwane, no. 4).

7 idus Oct. (Oct. 9), 1286. Braferton'. Induccio ejusdem. Decano<sup>1</sup> et capitulo nostro Ebor. Quia prebendam, que fuit domini Johannis de Kirkeby in ecclesia nostra Ebor., per consecracionem ejusdem in episcopum Elyensem vacantem, dilecto in Christo filio, magistro Thome de Wakefeld', subdecano Ebor., contulimus intuitu caritatis, devocioni vestre mandamus quatinus, ipsum in fratrem et concanonicum admittentes, ei stallum in choro et locum in capitulo ratione prebende hujusmodi debite assignetis in persona ejusdem modo consueto, quod vestrum est ulterius exequentes. If unable to serve the summons it was to be read in his house (aula) or before the door of his inn, or in some other public place (Beverley Chapter Act Book, ii, 149).

1027. Same day and place. Mandate to the chapter of Beverley, or their general proctor, to sequester whatever Master Thomas de Munkegate,<sup>1</sup> the sacrist, and the seven clerks, receiving daily stipends, 'nomine beneficii,' from the Bedern, held in the church of Beverley, for their contumacy in not appearing at the recent visitation (Ibid.).

He was employed by Giffard as his official, Nov. 14, 1268 (Reg. Giffard, no. 9), and was placed by him on various commissions and visitations (e.g., Ibid., no. 919). He was provided to Kirk Ella in 1274 (Ibid., no. 865), and collated by Giffard, Dec. 10 (Ibid., no. 862). He was a canon of Beverley (no. 1064 infra). In 1282 he was treasurer of Chichester (Dic. Nat. Biog.) and was much employed by archb. Peckham. He was consecrated bishop of Chichester, Sept. 5, 1288, and died Feb. 12, 1304-5 (Le Neve's Fasti, i, 241). The Lady Chapel of his cathedral was lengthened eastward in his time. He seems to have been an excellent bishop (no register left): his diocesan constitutions (1289) were the model of the constitutions enacted in 1306 by archb. Greenfield, who had been dean of Chichester under him.

of Beverley by April 29, 1284, when he was also archdeacon of Gloucester (Reg. Wickwane, no. 129), which points to the probability that, after Giffard's death, he had entered the service of bishop Godfrey Giffard at Worcester. He died 1287-8 (see no. 1061).

He must be the 'Anchenis' (obviously should be Ancherus) mentioned by Le Neve (Fasti, ii, 319) as archdeacon of London in 1261. Archb. Ludham promised him the prebend of Wetwang, but conferred it on his own brother, Thomas of Ludham (Reg. Giffara, nos. 24, 724), granting Ancher a pension of 80 marks. Ancher apparently claimed Newbald on the next vacancy, but the prebend was conferred on Wickwane, and Ancher renounced it in return for an increase of his pension (nos. 24, 26, 565, 724). The pension, however, fell into arrears, and Ancher apparently claimed Warthill on a vacancy (nos. 409, 636), but was appeased by a payment of the overdue sum in June, 1272 (no. 461). Probably, being doubtless armed with a provision, he succeeded to Newbald prebend when Wickwane vacated it.

Ripon, and about 1268 was collated to the sacristy of the Chapel (Reg. Giffard, no. 579; cf. nos. 580, 712). His prebend at York was Wistow (no. 1106 inf.). In 1268 he was collated to the archdeaconry of Bucks in Lincoln cathedral, and also held the prebend of Aylesbury from about 1285 to his death in 1290 (Le Neve, ii, 68, 95). The case was tried before the commissaries of the dean and chapter of York, and it was adjudged by Master J. de Craucumbe, archdeacon of the East Riding, their commissary, that the tithes in dispute belonged to the prebend. The prior and convent appealed, but ultimately the matter was settled before the archbishop, Master William appearing in person, and the prior and convent by their proctors, Nicholas de Bretteville and John de Pavilly, monks of their house,<sup>1</sup> when the following composition was entered into. Grenefeud' agreed to forego 20*li* arrears and 40 marks costs. He, as prebendary, was to receive tithes of corn and hay from Borland, and in return to pay 40s a year to the prior and convent half yearly at Martinmas and Whitsuntide. <sup>2</sup>John of Evreux, according to Le Neve (Fasti, iii, 449), held a mediety of the prebend of Oxtun at this time, the other being in the possession of Anglerus son of Jacopo (no. 1040).

<sup>3</sup>The present collation led to a dispute with the pope (no. 1127). Honorius iv died April 3, 1287, and Nicholas iv was not elected till Feb. 15, 1287-8. Romanus probably thought that, having done his duty by Pietro Savelli, he would take advantage of his death and the vacant papacy (he probably had not yet heard of the election by March 5) to promote an Englishman and a favourite of the king. On Jan. 13, 1288-9, Nicholas iv warned him, through the bishop of Lincoln, the abbot of Westminster, and Geoffrey of Vezzano, to revoke the collation, as the pope had conferred the prebend on Andrew de Laguscello, papal chaplain, at the request of his brother Bernard, bp. of Porto. Stated terms were given to the archb. and Peter for the performance of the pope's injunctions (Cal. P. L., i, 494). The archb. evidently obeyed, as Andrew vacated Bugthorpe in 1290 (no. 1104). On Oct. 18, 1294, Peter of Chester had various letters of protection granted him as provost of Beverley, canon of Hereford and Lichfield, and parson of Arksey, Easington (? E. R.), Rudby, Slaidburn, and Whalley. He was provost of Beverley in 1290 (see no. 1099 below. Cal. of Patent Rolls (1292-1301), pp 118, 121, 123).

Sept. 13, 1291. Nicholas iv issued a mandate to the archbishop of York to examine the case of Peter de Cestria, subdeacon, one of the king's clerks, and kinsman of the earl of Lincoln (Henry de Lacy), whom Fulk [Basset], bp. of London, by authority of Innocent iv, dispensed so as to enable him to hold one or more benefices besides the church of Walley, dio. Coventry [Whalley, Lancs], to the value of 100*li*, on which Peter obtained the churches of Buldeby (sic), Esynton, and Sleteburn, and the provostship of Beverley, and, after the council of Lyons, the church of Arkesey, dioc. York, without being ordained priest. If the above statement is accurate, the archb. is to grant him in the church of York, vacant by the death of Sir Peter de Sabello. Mandate to install.

<sup>1</sup>Bartholomew de Ferentino was prebendary of Twyford in St. Paul's cathedral in 1309 (Le Neve's Fasti, ii, 441). A Bartholomew occurs as bishop of Ferentino in 1306 (? the place of that name near Viterbo), but he seems to be a different person (Gams, Series Episcoporum, p. 691). See also no. 1108.

<sup>2</sup>Francis, called Gartan', is Francesco, son of Loffredo Gaetani, count of Caserta, and nephew of Benedetto Gaetani, cardinal of San Niccolò in Carcere Tulliano (Sir Harris Nicolas has San Silvestro). When Benedetto became Pope Boniface viii in 1294, his nephew Francesco was made cardinal of Sta Maria in Cosmedin. Master Benedict of "Angania," or Angnania, the papal notary, mentioned in Wickwane's Register (p. 186) is Benedict of Anagni, i.e., Boniface viii. Cardinal Francesco's other preferments at York were the prebends of Knaresborough with Bickhill, April 13, 1292 (no. 1141), Stillington, July 12, 1300 (Le Neve's Fasti, iii, 212), the treasurership, July 31, 1303 (Ibid., p. 159), and the archdeaconry of Richmond by Jan. 10, 1302-3 (Cal. of Pat. Rolls (1301-7), p. 102). He had letters of protection, July 15, 1304, as Francis Gaitani (Ibid., p. 238). He is probably the Francis Geyton noted as holding Langford Manor in Lincoln (Le Neve's Fasti, ii, 166). He apparently died in 1317, and held Knaresborough prebend till his death. A Giovanni Gaetani (called by Le Neve iii, 200, John de Gayton, and iii, 209, John Gaytiani) held Riccall and Loughton prebends in the early days of Melton's pontificate at York.

In 1286 letters of attorney were granted to him when going to Paris to study (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, 1281-1292, p. 261). See Reg. Wickwane, p. 109n. On May 21, 1291. Stephen de Mauley, then deacon and papal chaplain, received a dispensation from Nicholas iv to hold the churches of Bainton and Lythe, and the archdeaconry of Cleveland, hitherto held by him without dispensation, and, on resigning one of the churches, to accept another, with the usual conditions. On the same day he obtained an indult to receive the fruits of his archdeaconry and benefices for five years, without residing or being ordained priest, as he proposed to go on Crusade with the king (Cal. P.L., i, 537). He was presented by the prior and convent of Newburgh to the church of Owston in the Isle of Axholme, void by the death of John Clarell, and was instituted March 15, 1295-6, resigning the church of Lythe in accordance with the above dispensation (*Reg. Although this was the tenth Papal provision in those times the archb. would try as far as possible to satisfy it. It is certain that if the cardinal had known the state of Beverley Minster he would never have given the order. The church was founded by an English king in honour of God and veneration of the Blessed John, archbishop and confessor, and richly endowed with possessions it still holds. He placed there seven priests to celebrate mass, who, receiving their daily diet in cooked food and drink, should be obliged to reside there in person. That these priests might be free from all secular disquiet he endowed it with such liberties that no other church in England has the like. When the archb. lately visited it he saw the king's charter written in the English tongue. He tells this to the cardinal only for his information, as he is ready to obey him and the pope. If the archb. does not do this, the bp. of Durham and Master John de Luco, canon of London, have orders to compel him. The pope does not intend Master Thomas to hold both the chancellorship and the chapel, but, if he cannot obtain peaceful possession of the latter, he is to continue to hold the former. 1108. 14 kal. Sept. (Aug. 19), 1290. "Aput nos." Certificate from the chapter and canons of Southwell that, in obedience to a mandate from the archb., dated at Lanum, 15 kal. Sept., anno 5 (Aug. 18, 1290), they had admitted under a papal provision Roland de Ferentino,<sup>1</sup> in the person of Master Bartholomew de Ferentino, his proctor, to the prebend (of Rampton') in their church, vacant by the promotion of Senchius de Pine<sup>2</sup> to the archbishopric of Capua. There is also a letter from the king to the archb., dated at Westminster, June 18, 18th year (1290), on behalf of Roland de Ferentino, notwithstanding any grant by the king to Master Bonet de St. Quintin.

Similar letters with different salutations were written to B., cardinal deacon of San Niccolò in Carcere Tulliano, and with a different salutation to P., cardinal of Sant' Eustachio that is, Benedetto Gaetani, afterwards Boniface viii, and to Pietro Colonna.

<sup>4</sup>A note in Gregorovius (Stadt Rom, Eng. trans. v, 587), gives a clue to the identity of Oddo. "Matheus" or "Mathias" de Papa, of Anagni, was certainly a member of the house of Conti, and nephew of Pope Gregory ix; he was no doubt a brother of Adinulfo de' Conti (no. 1042 supra). He had two sons, Adinulfo and Niccolò, who were living in 1300. Oddo de' Conti was the son of Adinulfo. It may be noted that, while the Conti, and afterwards the Gaetani, acquired great influence in Anagni, it was never a baronial fortress, but a free city under a podestà.

1109. 3 kal. Sept. (Aug. 30), 1290. Lanum. Collation of Charles Beaumont<sup>3</sup> (Karolus de Bello monte), "obtentu serenissime domine, domine Alianore, Dei gracia regine

<sup>1</sup>Roland of Ferentino had been provided to the canonry and prebend, as long before as 1288, by Honorius iv. John de Luco (no. 1040) had been appointed to execute the pope's mandate, but found Bonet of St. Quentin (Reg. Wickwane, p. 236n), in possession of the benefice, and supported by some of the canons. John issued sentences of excommunication and interdict, and was imprisoned in the Tower by the king, on the ground that Bonet had been collated to the prebend by royal mandate. Grant dated Feb. 28, 1285-6 (Calendar of Patent Rolls (1281-1292), p. 325). Nicholas iv, on Aug. 27, 1288, desired the king to set John at liberty (Cal. P. L., i, 493). A further mandate, Feb. 25, 1288-9, ordered the archb. and Geoffrey of Vezzano to warn Bonet to vacate the prebend within fifteen days in favour of Roland: if the mandate was not obeyed, Bonet was to be summoned to appear at Rome in person, with Henry of Shipton (archdeacon of Nottingham, now dead) and Benedict of Southwell (that is, Benedict of Halam), who had been charged by John de Luco to admit Roland and had neglected the order, and the proctors of the chapter (Ibid., i, 495, 496).

Rome, round the Pantheon and Sta Maria sopra Minerva) had been admitted to Rampton in 1281 (Reg. Wickwane, no. 40). He was a Roman (ibid., p. 236n), which explains his surname, and was a relation of Cardinal Jacopo Colonna (Ibid., no. 478). Probably he was a Frangipane. Cencio or Cinthio was a traditional name in their family, and they belonged (though whether at this date is not sure) to the Pigna region. The Colonna, Orsini, Malebranchi, and Frangipani were all connected by marriage. Latino, bishop of Ostia, who consecrated Romanus, is sometimes called Latino Frangipane Malebranchi—his mother was an Orsini, sister of Nicholas iii, and his father a Malebranco.

Henry Beaumont, Edward ii's favourite, and Lewis Beaumont, bp. of Durham, were brothers, sons of Louis of Brienne, vicomte de Beaumont, son of John of Brienne, king of Jerusalem and emperor of Constantinople. Charles was evidently of the same family, and was probably related to Eleanor through her mother, Joan of Ponthieu. Yolande, daughter of John of Brienne, was second wife of the emperor Frederick ii, whose third wife was Isabel, aunt of Edward i.

Beverley.

1113. Wednesday before Martinmas (Nov. 8), 1290. In the chapter house at Beverley. Ordinance concerning the residence of the canons, office-holders, and seven clerks of the Berefeld' in the church of Beverley. There were present the provost, sacrist, chancellor, and four clerks of the Berefeld', Master John de Kancia, Robert de Crachalle, Peter de Rudby, and Robert de Cruce, and two more,

Osbert de Spaldington' and William Dandewe, by Richard, called Lawrance, and John de Lokyngton', their proctors, the corrody of the seventh clerk having been assigned of old to the sacrist. The case of Sir Peter, the provost, was reserved (Beverley Chapter Act Book, ii, 166).<sup>1</sup>

3 kal. Dec. (Nov. 29, 1290). Cawode. Mandate to the proctor of the chapter of Beverley to warn the precentor, chancellor, sacrist, and seven clerks of the Berefeld' to reside (Ibid., ii, 169). Fo. 101d.

Same day and place. Commission to the dean of Beverley, Sir W. de Patrington', and Sir Henry de Menill', the bailiff of Beverley, to audit the accounts of the executors of Matthew de Bridelington', deceased (Ibid., ii, 170). Matthew of Bridlington.

IIII4. 8 idus Jan. (Jan. 6, 1290-1). Rypon'. Collation of Sir Peter of Savoy, clk., "nobilitatem tui generis, quo dominum nostrum, regem Anglie illustrem, attinere dinosceris, attendentes," to the prebend of Neubald' in the church of York, vacant by the death of Sir Stephen de Suttona. Mandate to the dean and chapter to induct.<sup>2</sup> Newbald prebend.

IIII5. 9 kal. Feb. (Jan. 24), 1290-1. Burton'. Appointment of Master H. Sampson' and Master Reginald de Sancto Albano, as the archb.'s proctors, to treat with Sir Matthew, cardinal deacon of St. Mary in porticu, about the prebend of Fenton'.<sup>3</sup> Fenton prebend.

IIII6. II kal. Dec. (Nov. 21), 1290. "In capitulo Eboracensi. Composicio facta inter Eboracensem archiepiscopum et decanum et capitulum suum super visitacione ipsorum et obediencia decani. Missa ad Romanam curiam confirmanda" (Historians of York, iii, 216). Fo. 102d.<sup>4</sup> York.
Visitation of the dean
and chapter.

<sup>1</sup>On p. 169, l. 16 from bottom, for sigillo read sigillis. The provost's seal would be quite separate from that of the chapter. There is a description of a seal of the chapter of Beverley in Reg. Bowet, fo. 60d. The provost was a separate external officer and was the administrator of the temporalities of the church, and was in that capacity regarded as head of the chapter, although he had no decanal status or voice in spiritual affairs. The spiritual officer of the provosty was the dean (rural dean) of Beverley. Were the clerks of the Berefeld the clerks responsible for the business affairs of the provosty i.e., the provost's permanent chancery? The word most probably means "barley-field," and, in view of the thraves, was probably the Saxon name for the provosty. The word has been said to mean "bear-skin" from these clerks' supposed dress. For temporal purposes, the provost and the chapter, regarded as a land-owning corporation, would probably have had a common seal.

<sup>3</sup>Matteo Rubeo Orsini. The business was the attempt of the cardinal to annex the prebend to the hospital of San Spirito, treating it as a family heirloom from his uncle Giordano. See no. 1157.

3 kal. Jan. (Dec. 30), 1290. Cawode. Littera clausa, domino pape directa, pro negotio confirmationis predicte. Sanctissimo in Christo patri et domino reverendo, domino N., Dei providencia sacrosancte universalis ecclesie summo pontifici, suus servulus et sacerdos, J., permissione Ejusdem Ebor. ecclesie cure custos et minister humilis, Anglie primas, cum subjeccione omnimoda devota pedum oscula beatorum. Pater sancte, sicut navicula in medio maris, tempestate ac fluctibus conquassata, potentis naute presidium et portus tranquillitatem diligenter expectat, ita omnis ecclesia, adversitatibus fatigata, per vestri presidium et tutelam, quoniam incommutabilis et eterna Dei providencia navem beati Petri in hoc mari magno et spacioso regere voluit, quietis securitatem animosius prestolatur. Hujus rei gracia, quia Eboracensis ecclesia, ancilla vestra, meo commissa regimini, per usurpacionem et reluctacionem capituli ejusdem et aliorum plurimorum in diocesi et provincia adeo enormiter turbata extiterit et depressa, quod ipsius iurisdiccio per predecesores meos aut me exerceri debite non potuit in eisdem; ut ad relevacionem aliqualem status sui, previo vestre sanctitatis adiutorio, habeam faciliorem in dispersorum revocationem progressum, cum decano et capitulo super visitacione capituli, obediencia decani, et quibusdam aliis contenciose iurisdicciois articulis in quamdam pacis composicionem concorditer est consensus. Verum, quia ex conducto inter nos tunc demum ipsa composicio obtinebit vigorem cum apostolice confirmationis munimine fuerit roborata, paternitati vestre sanctissime, ad pedes vestros beatissimos provolutus, humiliter supplico et attente quatinus composicionem predictam, ad evidentem, ut creditur, Ebor. ecclesie utilitatem, inspirante celesti numine, introductam, graciosius approbantes, eam vestra dignetur mellita benignitas, subditis favens et prospiciens, ut soliditatem sorciatur perpetuam, confirmacione apostolica communire, in quo gratum Deo, ut spero, prestabitis obsequium, dum tam antiquatas procellas aura vestre clemencie redegerit in tranquillum. In dierum longitudine paternam incolumitatem Pater conservet eternus ad sublimacionem ecclesie et consolacionem populi Christiani.

Ut supra prox. Eidem domino pape per capitulum Ebor. pro eodem negotio. Ponentes ante consideracionis nostre oculos quam bonum quamque sit jocundum habitare fratres in unum,<sup>1</sup> intenta eciam meditacione pensantes quod in justicie et pacis osculo humane salutis redempcio parabatur,<sup>2</sup> pacem juxta psalmistam quesivimus, et persecuti mente sedula sumus eam.<sup>3</sup> Ab olim siquidem exorte discordie inter Ebor. ecclesie, ancille vestre, antistites, et ejusdem ecclesie capitulum, super statu ipsius ecclesie quo ad jurisdictionem et quedam alia, produxerunt jurgia, lites foverunt, scandala suscitaverunt, divinum minuebant obsequium, necnon tam archiepiscopis quam capitulo dampna plurima intulerunt, a quibus consensu unanimi hiis diebus, ministrante Altissimo, salubriter est recessum, prout mutua compositio, pacis nuncia, hec expressius recitans, indicat, sancte dominationi vestre, cum precipere placuerit, exhibenda. Inde est quod paternitati vestre sanctissime, ad pedes vestros beatissimos provoluti, humilime supplicamus quatinus compositiorem predictam, ad inestimabilem Eboracensis ecclesie utilitatem, inspirante celesti numine, introductam, graciosius approbantes, eam vestra dignetur mellita benignitas subditis favens et prospiciens, ut soliditatem sorciatur perpetuam, apostolice confirmacionis munere roborare, in quo gratum Deo, ut speramus, prestabitis obsequium, dum, etc.
